WILSON AROUSED OVER NOTE

NO DELAY, PRESIDENT DECLARES

WASHINGTON, June 8. (Bulletin)—President Wilson this afternoon authorized the State Department that his rejoinder to the German note was put in final shape at today's Cabinet meeting, and that he hopes it will be dispatched tomorrow.

By A. M. JAMIESON.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—President Wilson today emphatically stated to callers that there had been no delay in sending the American rejoinder to Germany.

He ridiculed reports that a split had occurred among his advisers over the matter, or that the note had been changed in any vital particular since the original draft was read to the Cabinet last Friday.

The President told his visitors that extreme care had been exercised in the preparation of the reply, and that it would be sent to Germany as soon as it was finished. He declared he expected to read it to the Cabinet today for final suggestion, and that shortly thereafter it would be ready for transmission.

With some show of indignation, the President said the government could not write the note as fast as some newspapers desired him to, and that the speculation over the alleged delay embarrassed him greatly. He said it had created an initial impression across the Atlantic which was likely to become permanent.

Many suggestions had been made at the last Cabinet meeting, the President added, and some of them had been accepted. None changed the general character of the note, however.

Secretary of State Bryan was among these who made suggestions, but the President scouted reports that there had been any differences of opinion between them. President Wilson said he saw nothing unsatisfactory about the German note relating to the Gulflight and the Cushing, but would pursue the subject further.

He said he had not been informed as to what procedure would be followed in the Gulflight case, now that the German government had admitted responsibility for damage to her. A partial report had been received about the Nebraskan, the President stated, but complete information is yet to come.

ANITA TURNBULL BRIDE OF A REAL AMERICAN BARON

Beatrice Anita Baldwin Turnbull, now Baroness de Patterson, and the Baron.

Beatrice Anita Baldwin Turnbull, who recently lost her fight for a third of the $11,000,000 estate of "Lucky" Baldwin, is today Baroness de Patterson, the wife of America's only real baron, Andrew Vincent Patterson of New York, but only after overcoming legal and religious obstacles to her wedding that would have daunted a couple less determined.

The baroness and her husband left Boston early today for New York, after expressing their heartfelt thanks to Thomas Connolly, secretary to Governor Walsh, Congressman Holden Tinkham, and Assistant City Messenger Charles E. Silloway, all of whom had to be called in before anyone could be found who would marry them.

They were finally married by Mr. Silloway, a justice of the peace, at Mr. Silloway's home in Rockland street, Roxbury, after the Rev. Alex-

FIVE SHIPS TORPEDOED

'VAMPIRE' IN WHITNEY CASE

3 NEUTRAL VESSELS BLOWN UP

By JOHN C. FOSTER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, June 8.—Activity by German submarines on a large scale continues in the waters all around the British Islands, and today reports were received of the sinking of five large vessels, three of which were of Norwegian nationality.

Of the others, one was a Belgian ship and the other a Russian vessel. The victims were as follows:

Norwegian ship Glittertind, 717 tons, sunk in North Sea, off Shields, while en route to Hartlepool from Sweden with cargo of timber. All of crew saved.

Norwegian bark Superb, 1515 tons, sunk in Atlantic Ocean off Fastnet, Ireland, while en route to Queenstown from Buenos Ayres, with cargo of grain. All crew saved.

Norwegian steamship Trudvang, 1040 tons, sunk in St. George's Channel, off Welsh coast. All of crew saved.

Russian schooner Adolf, sunk in North Sea, off Scotch coast, with loss of two members of crew.

Belgian steamship Menapier, [illegible] tons, sunk in North Sea, off English coast, with loss of seventeen lives.

The submarine that blew up the Trudvang tried to torpedo a British patrol boat which had picked up the members of the Trudvang's crew, but was driven off by gunfire.

The Trudvang's seamen were given twenty minutes to leave the vessel and then she was sunk with twelve shots.

A bomb was placed on board the Superb and a big hole was torn in her bottom. Survivors of the Superb who were landed at Cahirciveen reported that the vessel was flying the Norwegian flag when attacked.

Wilson Has No Word of Dutch Peace Plans

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—President Wilson has received no official information regarding the peace movement said to have been promoted by Van Ghell Geldemeester, son of the religious adviser to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

The President today told his callers he did not know whether the Dutch government was aiding the movement, and said his only knowledge of it had been obtained through the newspapers. The executive said that the League of Peace meeting soon to be held in Philadelphia had no connection with the United States government.

LIKENS WOMAN TO CLEOPATRA

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, counsel for Mrs. Annie L. Whitney, who is contesting the will of her husband, Theodore D. Whitney, the Boston merchant, quoted from Kipling's "Vampire" today in describing Mrs. Amy H. Barker, beneficiary under the will.

He also compared the relations of Whitney and Mrs. Barker to those of "Anthony and Cleopatra 2000 years ago."

Spectators crowded the Superior Court to listen to the arguments of counsel in the now celebrated case.

"EIGHT WILY LAWYERS."

The case, now in its fourth week, is expected to go to the jury tomorrow.

Attorney O'Connell, in his opening argument, said:

"It has been an important case. It was really a case between the wife and another woman. It is a case for you to decide whether a wife should be cast aside for another woman.

"I have been opposed in this contest by eight wily, cunning, [illegible] lawyers—men of brains. The [illegible] trained minds decided that they had a desperate case, so they abandoned the usual course of presentation and put their case in first. They made up their minds to take the curse off the case by telling the truth themselves.

"Whitney did not bring Mrs. Barker to his father's home. Whitney had to maintain two establishments and, according to Mr. Tirrell, Whitney maintained three establishments for Mrs. Barker. He would not bring that woman into the holy home of his father and mother.

"Now, let us go back to the time of Mr. Whitney's marriage. The ceremony was performed at the Congregationalist Church in 1877 by the Rev. Edward Everett Hale.

LOUNGING PLACE FOR GHOSTS.

"Mr. and Mrs. Whitney lived happily until the woman, Mrs. Barker, appeared. At Salem he met this siren.

"Ashamed to meet his wife he decided on the exceptional course of having her live at the St. James Hotel. The St. James Hotel was known at that time as a lounging place for ghosts, according to gossip in those days. Mr. Whitney wanted his wife to live there despite that talk about ghosts. Mrs. Whitney, being a dutiful wife, yielded.

"Oh, the power, the influence which was used by Amy H. Barker in getting Theodore D. Whitney to put his wife under an uncanny spell at the St. James Hotel, which was just over a graveyard where they were burying bodies daily, where talk was going on about ghosts and people were frightened.

"Oh, the cunning of Whitney in 1880. He tells his wife he is going

Catch Alleged Wagon Thief in Stirring Chase

After a thrilling chase in which an automobile was impressed into service, David Noonan, twenty-five, of No. 251 Second street, South Boston, was arrested today at the entrance of the Albany building, Summer street, on the charge of attempting to steal Marshall & Moulton's express wagon containing shoes, sweaters and rubber heels valued at $3,000.

The pursuit and capture were witnessed by hundreds of people coming from the South Station.

J. Edward Richardson, driver, told the police he was coming out of a building at Church Green and Summer street when he saw Noonan drive away with his express wagon. He gave chase, climbed over the tailboard and grabbed the man on the seat. After a struggle the man jumped from the wagon and ran.

Richardson stopped the wagon and hailed a passing automobile. Noonan was running along Summer street toward the South Station and had a big start. Through Dewey square he ran, pursued by the automobile with Richardson in the back seat, shouting. The automobile stopped long enough in front of the South Station to pick up Patrolman William Lewis and the chase was resumed.

The patrolman and the driver finally cornered their quarry at the entrance to the Albany building.

Judge Reunites Women Friends Who Quarreled

Catherine Conley of No. 15 Fifth street, and Mrs. Bridget Harrington of No. 1 Fifth street, South Boston, were neighbors and friends for many years until recently when they became bitter enemies over quarrels between their children, with the result that they were both in the local court today charged with assault and battery each upon the other.

After hearing the evidence Judge William J. Day said, addressing both women: "Don't you know that children will always keep you in trouble if you take notice of their mischievous acts?"

"Yes, your honor," both women replied.

"Well, now, I want both of you to come up before me and shake hands."

Both women complied with the judge's request and a hearty handshake followed. Judge Day found both of them not guilty. After which they left the courtroom arm in arm, wreathed in smiles.

New Dance to Take Place of 'Vulgar' Trots

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The grizzly bear, turkey trot, bunny hug, Argentine tango and all kindred dances are vulgar and barbarous, according to the decree of the International Association of Dancing Masters now holding a six-day convention here. These dances must be abolished, the masters assert.

To assure the doing away with them, the sixty-five leading masters of the United States and Canada will evolve a new dance, a happy medium between the modern steps and the old fashioned two-step and waltz. The name of the new dance will be announced late this week.

BEER WAS ORDERED BY NURSE

HAVERHILL, June 8.—Miss Alice Marshall, superintendent of the Tuberculosis Hospital, resumed the stand today at the hearing of charges against her and submitted to a cross examination at the hands of Scott Peters, the prosecuting attorney. Miss Marshall was calm and collected.

That she was ordered to serve beer and whiskey to patients, among them Wilson Melrose, the actor, and that she used to order a keg of beer from the city supply agent, were some of the facts brought out in today's examination.

ACCUSED OF INEFFICIENCY.

She is charged with being inefficient and incompetent in her administration of the hospital's affairs. Today's testimony reads:

RECRUIT HUNDREDS OF BOYS

Investigation by the Department of Justice of the charges that Boston boys are being lured to England on cattle boats and then into service in the British army showed today that between 1,500 and 2,000 young men have been shipped out of Boston since the European war began, principally on cattle boats bound for England. This was learned from examination of the ships' manifests, according to statements made in official quarters today.

The investigation also indicates that a majority of the persons thus shipped were under twenty-one years of age.

The investigation showed further that a majority of those shipped were enlisted in the British army after their arrival.

A considerable number of names of young men shipping from Boston and vicinity were taken from the manifests. This group was looked up. All were found to be minors.

LEFT STRANDED.

It has been shown that boys who landed in England from cattle steamers are left absolutely stranded on the streets for the most part, having received no compensation for their services except their transportation across to England.

Immediately after landing these boys are importuned by British soldiers and recruiting sergeants to join the army. They are told that they will not be sent to the front, but that their soldier's life will be one long members of the Cabinet over the terms of the note to Germany existed became known definitely when Secretary Bryan went to the White House and, after a talk with the President, took the note back to the State Department to couch it in the phraseology which he thought should be employed.

WILSON AND BRYAN SAID TO DIFFER ON REPLY TO GERMANY

The note as originally phrased by the President and as revised by Secretary Bryan in the evening, with the assistance of Counsellor Lansing, was to be considered by the full Cabinet today and a decision reached on its final terms.

Another and most important question to be considered by the Cabinet today was whether or not it is advisable for the United States to send a firm note to Great Britain demanding all rights for American commerce under international law at the same time the note to Germany is forwarded.

Secretary Bryan is of the opinion that this should be done.

BRYAN FOR NOTE TO BRITAIN.

The International News Service today learned on the highest authority that Secretary Bryan had proposed such a note at the time the first note was sent to Germany, and had then urged that the issues now between the two nations and the United States be made synchronously.

The President and the Cabinet disagreed with Secretary Bryan and decided that the issues should be made separately.

Since then Mr. Bryan has urged repeatedly that the note which he had prepared protesting against Great Britain's infringements on the rights of American commerce, should be forwarded, but he has not succeeded in obtaining the authority of the President and the Cabinet to send it.

It is understood Secretary Bryan did not fully approve of the length to which the President went in his "strict accountability" note to Germany. The Secretary of State, it is said, would have confined the American protest to the unlawful action of Germany in taking the lives of American citizens traveling the high seas upon an unarmed vessel with a demand for reparation for the loss of those lives and an assurance that Germany would commit no further unlawful acts imperiling the safety of Americans.

President Wilson's note went further than that. It demanded that Germany cease her submarine warfare against all merchant vessels as it was practically impossible, in his view, for a submarine to make "visit and search" as required by international law, before torpedoing such vessel.

When it came to framing the second note to Germany several members of the Cabinet were very strongly of the opinion that it should be couched in even more vigorous terms than had been employed in the first note. Their argument was that these are no times for a display of weakness.

If there was weakness in the American demand the German foreign office would quickly discover it, they said, and as quickly reject the demands. If we wanted our demands granted, they argued, the only way to insure their being granted would be to put them in such terms as would make Germany feel she could not afford to refuse.

President Wilson himself was not inclined—and from the best information obtainable with respect to his present intention is not inclined now—to make the demands of his first note less vigorous in the second communication now being drafted.

British Soldier in Pit Throws Bombs Back at Germans

LONDON, June 8.—The official British eye witness tells today of a British soldier who lay all day long in a shell crater near a German trench and hurled back at his foes the hand grenades they tossed into the pit to kill him. He was the sole survivor of his party, and succeeded in keeping himself safe from rifle fire.

At nightfall he escaped in the darkness to the British lines.

FRENCH ADVANCE BOTH NORTH AND SOUTH OF ARRAS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, June 8.—Hostilities between the French and Germans are now raging both north and south of Arras and progress for the French troops is reported in both these sections in an official communique issued by the War Office today.

South of Arras, on the Souchez front, the French have scored another advance in the vicinity of the Souchez sugar factory, which has been the scene of very bloody fighting.

German counter attacks in the German defences, known as the "Labyrinth," southeast of Neuville St. Vaast, were repulsed and the French successfully defended all the works they had taken there from the Teutons. South of Arras on the Hebuterne-Serre road the French captured 150 German prisoners. Hebuterne is about twelve miles south by southwest from Arras. The extension of hostilities by the French indicates that General Joffre may contemplate a big effort to force a wedge between the German right and the German centre.

These two formations join on the Oise River, north of its junction with the Aisne.

Rockland Firm Gets War Order for Shoes

ROCKLAND, June 8.—The Rice & Hutchins shoe factory has received another large war order for 250,000 pairs of shoes, to be made as soon as possible. This is practically a duplicate of a similar order received not long ago, and means increasing the force of employes from 1,100 to 1,500, and overtime work. The contract cannot be completed before some time in the Fall.

WHITNEY WILL CASE IS ARGUED

to Salem to see Charles Barker. [illegible] that June, 1880, Charles Barker and Whitney sends Mrs. Whitney and his child to the mountains. Whitney had nothing to do with Mr. Barker in a business or social way.

"Charles S. Barker was a soldier. He was patriotic enough to be willing to lay down his life for his country. Can you imagine a soldier with his principles willing to consign his wife to the arms of a married man with wife and child?

BARKER'S NAME DEFENDED.

"Shame on those who would bring shame on the good name of Charles S. Barker or who propose such a thing. Barker was an honorable man and a soldier. He left his wife a home worth $2,700 and $1,800 in the savings bank. The idea that Barker would give over his wife into the lecherous hands of Whitney is preposterous.

"Mrs. Barker testified that she could only remember living at Hotel Westland, Brookline and Melrose, but we proved many other places of residence. At Hotel Westland Whitney and Mrs. Barker were living. The testimony on this point of the colored janitor is undeniable. There was nobody in the apartment but Mrs. Barker and T. D. Whitney. He was lavishing money on her.

"Mrs. Barker on the witness stand gave her age as sixty-eight, but she didn't look fifty. She compares favorably with any woman of forty-five. Mrs. Barker said she was sixty-eight, but she looks younger than many a woman at forty-eight. Could you believe she is sixty-eight?"

HIS "LADY FAIR."

"The Whitney profits for life were $515,000 and his business share today stands only $228,000. There is only one conclusion to reach and that is that Whitney spent $250,000 on that woman and those around him.

"Land, stocks, bonds, notes—all for Amy H. Barker. And still they say this was the man who was dominating—having his own way."

In dramatic voice, Attorney O'Connell then said:

'A fool there was and he made his prayer,
Even as you and I,
To a rag and a bone and a hank o' hair——
The fool he called her his lady

"Gentlemen, need I go any further?" He called her his 'Lady Fair,' because he thought so. And this is the man who thought he was dominating—living his own way!

Then Attorney O'Connell compared Whitney and Mrs. Barker with Anthony and Cleopatra 2,000 years ago.

"And then let 'em tell you that he, though he was a great business man, was able to withstand what great men have not been able to withstand—the temptations, wiles, sensuous, clinging clasp of the mistress. She coiled herself about him. She wound her way into his affections. She shackled his heart, forbidding him to go to his wife and son.

GOT A FAIR INCOME.

Then Attorney O'Connell accused Mrs. Myrick, sister of Mr. Whitney, of having "a consuming, burning and dastardly hatred of Mrs. Whitney."

Returning to Mrs. Barker, he said:

"Mr. Whitney was dominated by the wiles and whims of this woman, who today has an income of $1,500, a home in Hampton and stocks in the American Bell Telephone Company and in the American Smelting Company which gives her a dividend of 7 per cent.

"At sixty-eight if I had an income of $1,500, I would consider myself a lucky man. What more does she need? Her family has got everything and now she wants $115,000 more in cash. She's got a sure income and it simply means that Theodore D. Whitney gave her that money. He gave her a fair and decent income and nobody needs more."

BOSTON BOY TELLS HOW HE WAS ENTICED INTO BRITISH ARMY

[illegible] in England. They are assured, too, that they will get a cash bonus on enlistment and some fine new uniforms.

Investigators of the Department of Justice have talked with boys who have deserted from the British army and returned to this country. These boys told the investigators that whole companies in British regiments now drilling in England, for shipment to the trenches, are made up of American boys.

The boys say that the English recruiting officers recognize that American boys are strong and brave and are good shots, so that they make splendid additions to the British forces.

Frederick P. Schmid, special agent in charge of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in this district, will submit a report tomorrow to United States District Attorney George W. Anderson.

The investigation will also reveal astounding conditions at this port regarding shipment of boys under age.

Every man, woman and child going aboard steamers for England or other countries must pass under the scrutiny of Boston immigration officials.

These cattle boys "boys" signed on as twenty-one years old. Minors can go as apprentices only with consent of parents. There is only one instance where a boy was signed as a minor and with his parents' approval.

James Pope, a fifteen-year-old East Boston boy who served fifteen days in the English army and then deserted, today told the story of the pressure brought to bear by steamship and recruiting officers to secure his enlistment.

The boy sailed from Boston on the Leyland liner Canadian, as a cattle tender, April 9, the day he was fifteen years old.

At Liverpool he and other American boys who sailed on the Canadian were immediately thrown into the company of English recruiting officers, who talked of the joys of soldier life.

The recruiting sergeant told him to tell the recruiting officer he was a Canadian.

"And your age is nineteen," the boy says the recruiting officer said to him at the point where the age was written into the recruiting blank. Before the boy could say "Yes," as he would have said, the recruiting officer passed on to the next question."

The boy served in the British Infantry, which has lost its identity, according to him. "It's an American regiment now," young Pope said. "The recruiting officer said they want to get 600 Americans to fill up the third battalion and make it a Yankee regiment."

James Pope, fifteen, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pope of No. 326 Meridian street, East Boston. He is large for his age, but Congressman Tague, to whom the boy has told his story, avers that he would never be mistaken for nineteen.

"I was in the seventh grade of the Chapman School on Eutaw street, East Boston, and I had trouble with the teacher," said the Pope boy. "I ran away. I slipped aboard the Leyland liner Canadian at the East Boston dock. There were a few American boys, but none as young as I. Most of the boys were from Canada. One came from Chicago.

"Three days out from Boston we went on strike because of the poor food. The steward promised to pay us half a crown a day if we would go back to work. We went back, but never got the money. In Liverpool we stormed the Leyland line offices, but it did us no good. The officials tried to buy off our leader, with ten crowns, but he threw the money in their faces.

"After the third day out the steward got us all together and talked war and the British army. He told us the best way to enlist. He told us to be sure and say we were from Canada. He told us how to answer all the questions and told us the service that paid the best money. He talked as though he knew all about the army, although he was a sailor on a merchant vessel.

"In Liverpool they put us into the Cunard Hotel. As soon as we landed and had a good meal the proprietor stood up on a platform and made a speech, asking us to enlist. British army officers came in and also spoke just like the proprietor.

"When we went out doors in the alleyway, English soldiers were waiting for us. They told us how nice the army was.

"Well, I thought everything was lovely and I enlisted. On the way up to the recruiting officer, the recruiting-sergeant told me not to forget to say I was from St. John, New Brunswick. I told the recruiting officer. He said to me, 'And your age is twenty-one.' Before I could answer—I would have told him 'Yes,'—he went on to the next question.

"I joined the Third Battalion of Irish Infantry. All the soldiers knew I was an American boy. The recruiting officers said they wanted 600 Americans to fill up the ranks and make it a Yankee company.

"There were a great many boys in the regiment as young as I. There were ten at least from this country."

ANITA BALDWIN TURNBULL AND AMERICAN BARON ARE MARRIED

ander Mann, rector of Trinity, and a score of other Back Bay clergymen had refused to officiate because Mr. Patterson was divorced from his first wife.

TINKHAM TO THE RESCUE.

It was Congressman Tinkham who suggested Mr. Silloway as a solution of the difficulties that seemed about to block the marriage, and Mr. Tinkham overcame any scruples that Mr. Silloway might have had. It was Secretary Connolly who appealed to Mr. Tinkham, and Connolly was enlisted by Lerman C. Prior, manager of Hotel Lenox.

But the obstacles began to arise even before the Baron and Miss Turnbull started out in their auto to find a clergyman. The Baron arrived from New York, rushed to the license bureau in City Hall, and asked to be permitted to waive the five-day law.

Then he discovered that he must get permission from the Court to do this. Accordingly he hurried to the Municipal Court. Judge Joseph F. Sheehan heard his reasons for being in a hurry and finally granted legal sanction to an immediate wedding.

While waiting for his license, Mr. Patterson arranged to see Dr. Mann, and over the telephone ordered the wedding dinner at the Lenox. Accompanied by Miss Turnbull, he motored to Trinity, to receive his second set-back. Dr. Mann courteously—but firmly—refused to officiate, on account of Patterson's matrimonial history.

CLERGYMEN REFUSE.

Still determined to be married by an Episcopalian clergyman, the couple motored around the Back Bay, trying one clergyman after another. All, however, took the same stand as Dr. Mann.

It was then that they returned to the Lenox, in despair, almost ready to countermand the wedding dinner. They told Manager Pryor their troubles, and finally, with the help of the manager, the Governor's secretary and the Congressman, they overcame the last obstacle.

The Baroness and her husband will stay in New York only until the Baron has received final instructions in the business of the Standard Oil Company, which takes him to Arizona.

Originally the couple, who first met in New York less than six months ago, and the engagement of whom was announced but a month ago, had planned to wed this Fall. These plans were hastily changed only last Sunday when the groom, who is employed by the Standard Oil Company, got orders to proceed to some newly discovered Arizona oil fields.

MET BARON LAST WINTER.

In applying for the marriage license the groom gave his age as forty-two and his address as No. 59 West Forty-fifth street, New York city. He stated that it was his second marriage, his first having resulted in a divorce.

The wedding culminates a romance begun in New York last Winter when they were introduced to each other by the bride's own mother. The latter had known Baron Patterson—then plain "Mr." Patterson—over twenty years, having first met him out on the Pacific Coast. Between her daughter and the Baron it was mutually a case of love at first sight. Their engagement followed a few weeks ago.

The groom, a native of Cleveland, O., is employed by the Standard Oil Company as an expert organizer. It was for his efforts in developing commerce between this country and Portugal, while serving in the latter country, as the company's foreign representative, that he was knighted as a baron by King Carlos. He is said to be the only American thus honored without first relinquishing his American citizenship. At the time the conferring of this title by King Carlos created a sensation in diplomatic circles.

BOSTON MAN HAD LOST 40 POUNDS

James Beatty of No. 20 Helden Street Underwent an Operation.

"You should take Plant Juice," is becoming a "catch" phrase in Boston, in answer to an interrogation as to the state of one's health. It is heard on the streets, the street cars, the theatre lobbies and wherever people congregate. At present Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, is one of the most talked-of preparations ever placed upon the market, for it will give instant, positive relief in almost every case of stomach, liver and kidney trouble and rheumatism, and if continued the results are permanent. It is nature's own remedy, composed of medicinal roots, herbs, barks and berries and does not contain minerals, narcotics or habit-forming drugs.

Boston people call daily at the demonstration of this remedy and give voluntary testimonials as to its merits and the benefits they have received. For instance, Mr. James Beatty, who resides at No. 20 Helden street, and who works for the City of Boston and was born and reared in this city and is a well known man, stated:

"I had stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and pains in my back for years. After meals I would have severe pains in my stomach and all through my body. I lost 40 lbs. in weight in two years. My food would ferment in my stomach, causing bloating and gas belching. I was very restless and nervous and did not sleep well at night. I was operated on for my trouble, but it only helped me temporarily. I have now only taken one bottle of your Plant Juice and I can say for publication that I am feeling better than I have in a long time. I feel like a new man. I can certainly indorse Plant Juice as doing all and more than is claimed for it."

There are numerous symptoms of this trouble that Plant Juice can relieve. In fact, any of the following may denote affections of the stomach: Indigestion, dyspepsia, belching of wind, bad breath, sick, throbbing headache, poor circulation, night sweats, that tired feeling, costiveness, coated tongue or a poor complexion.

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

MERCHANTS AID IN BETTER STREETS FIGHT

Prominent Boston merchants support the AMERICAN'S campaign for better streets for Boston, and urge that immediate action be taken to improve the streets.

They know the value of good streets to the city and speak from the experience of successful business men. These are their reasons for demanding that the streets be given attention at once.

By JOHN SHEPARD, JR.

of the Shepard Norwell Company.

Of course, there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to the lawful condition of the streets in and around Boston at the present time.

They appear to be much worse than for many years. Surely, everyone agrees that it is necessary to correct this evil and correct it quickly. As I understand the matter, there is not money at hand sufficient to do this work. If not, money must be raised by some means, and doubtless the Mayor of our city has ideas on this matter which might well be carried out.

While on this subject of streets, I want to call attention to the wretched condition of the city (particularly on a Sunday morning) because of newspapers and papers of various kinds thrown carelessly anywhere and everywhere, particularly in the downtown section.

I am told that there is a law which makes such action subject to fine, but it is not enforced. It would seem to me that in every case where a person is seen throwing paper into the street or on the sidewalk that they should be arrested and fined; thus would be removed much of the unsightly appearance of our city streets and sidewalks.

The effect on anyone arriving in Boston at the South Station has been for many months such as to present an advertisement to keep away from Boston, rather than to come to it. Of course I know that the building of the subway has been the direct cause, but it is impossible almost to walk across from the station to any sidewalk on a moist or wet day without walking through mud, to speak guardedly, at least a quarter or an inch deep. Places of such general use and prominence should at least be kept clean.

By T. H. MAGRANE.

of the Magrane Houston Company.

I am glad of the opportunity to subscribe to the laudable movement of the Boston AMERICAN for better streets. The substantial amount of the taxpayers' money appropriated annually by the City of Boston for the maintainance and repair of streets is going to grow by leaps and bounds unless public officials very soon make investment adequate to effect a systematic overhauling of the roadbeds.

It is impossible for any department, no matter how efficient, to get a fair return from the amount now expended for repairs with the streets in their present broken condition. Unless extensive rebuilding is commenced very soon the annual expense must needs be increased gradually and with diminishing results.

If it is not good financeering to pay off the entire expense of new streets within five years, then this should not delay this much needed improvement. Experts advise us that modern paving will endure for fifty years, consequently, street building is in the line of permanent improvement and should hardly be classed as current expense and the payment might reasonably be extended over a much longer term of years. So might be said about civic pride and the moral obligation of the city in the matter of the proper upkeep of all public property that I refer not to go into detail from these standpoints.

By SIMON VORENBERG,

President S. Vorenberg Company.

There is no more serious problem confronting the city just now in my opinion than that of our streets. Our streets are in a very bad condition. Many are filled with holes and other defects which are a danger not only to all traffic, but to the general public as well. These conditions are especially noticeable in the streets of the downtown section.

That something should be done is, I believe, the demand of the citizens of Boston. Good streets means much to the city and good streets beautify, make for better health conditions and save money all around. As a business man, I would call good streets a splendid municipal investment.

I don't believe so much in talking, as in doing something. Action is what Boston needs now. Immediate action should be taken by those who have the power to remedy the street problem and to put our streets in a condition which would be a merit to the city. Delays are dangerous and I think the old proverb, "Do not put off tomorrow what can be done today," might be used in this case. Tomorrow never comes.

By C. E. OSGOOD, of the C. E. Osgood Company.

Nothing seems to run smooth except the electrics. I frequently motor in from my Summer home in Sharon, and I can always tell when I strike the Boston line, with my eyes shut.

In comparison with all of the suburban roads with which I am familiar, 90 per cent. of the Boston streets are in a most deplorable condition. Take Eliot street, for instance, which has recently been re-paved. Unless you fairly crawl along in your car, there is grave danger of a broken spring. This applies also to the Arlington street crossing at Boylston street and innumerable other places.

Many of my business friends use steam and electrics rather than take chances with their cars with the roads in their present condition; and these conditions are rapidly growing worse.

Repairs on our motor trucks average nearly 50 per cent. more than previous years.

By FELIX VORENBERG,

of the Gilchrist Company.

The present condition of the streets of Boston is appalling and must appeal to any self-respecting citizen.

Apparently it is necessary to expend $500,000 to put them in proper condition and I believe it ought to be done and without further delay. If the money cannot be raised in any other way, the City of Boston should be allowed to borrow the amount necessary. Business men unanimously agree that it is bad policy to borrow money for current expenses, but the streets cannot wait for conditions to change.

WHITE'S STAR DAY

R.H.WHITE Co.

Our 54th Star Day, Wednesday, June 9th

WILL BE A

Record Breaker!

WHITE'S STAR DAY.

FOREWORD!

Just a year ago this Wednesday, we held the biggest Star Day Sale we ever held in any Summer month in all the history of our famous Star Day Sales.

Weeks ago I personally notified every buyer that the great sale of June, 1914, must be beaten this year.

It is of paramount importance that we should go ahead of last year's great volume of sales to prove our progressiveness.

Now, over my signature, I wish to say to our friends, both old and new, and the general public, that the interest and enthusiasm shown by our buyers to make this day a huge success have resulted in their EXCEEDING ALL EXPECTATIONS in the NUMBER and the QUALITY of BARGAINS secured.

Many mills, manufacturers and importers—anxious to turn their stocks into cash before July 1st—made ENORMOUS CONCESSIONS and SACRIFICES.

Having personally examined many of these lots, I am satisfied that our aim for an EXTRAORDINARY DAY will be realized.

It is a great satisfaction for me to thus join our ambition for a record day with YOUR BEST INTERESTS, for this is a day when you will be able to buy dependable goods at MUCH MORE than USUAL SAVINGS.

I trust none of our many thousands of friends will miss this Star Day.

It Will Be the Bargain Event of the Season

DENIES COE'S WIFE IS TO REJOIN HIM

Allan Ainslee, father of Mrs. Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., who is reported to have left Boston for the purpose of joining her missing husband in Alaska, today denied that his daughter would rejoin Mr. Coe. He said:

"I do not know of any such intention. Mrs. Coe is with her mother in New York trying to recuperate from her recent ordeal. I do not know of any plan for her to go to Alaska, and scarcely think any such idea is feasible. I do not know either when she will return home."

Going to the Exposition? Don't Miss Colorado Scenery

No one can be indifferent to the beauty and grandeur of the Colorado Rocky Mountain scenery, and [illegible] to the Exposition [illegible] should make a point of seeing it. Also Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, the Royal Gorge and Salt Lake City.

Now there's no extra charge for all this if you go via the Burlington Route (C., B. & Q.), and it so happens that the through service of trains has been planned so that you pass all of these points by daylight, and you can view from the train a panorama of mountain scenery that is as celebrated as any in the world.

Surely on your way you will not miss this opportunity and I would like to send you free some pictures, maps and printed matter, not only of the Colorado wonders, but also of Glacier Park or Yellowstone Park, which, by all means, you should visit on the return trip. Please make use of me—let me help plan the trip for you. Call on or write Alex Stocks, New England Passenger Agent, C. B. & Q. R. R., 264 Washington St., Boston, Mass. REST AND RECREATION

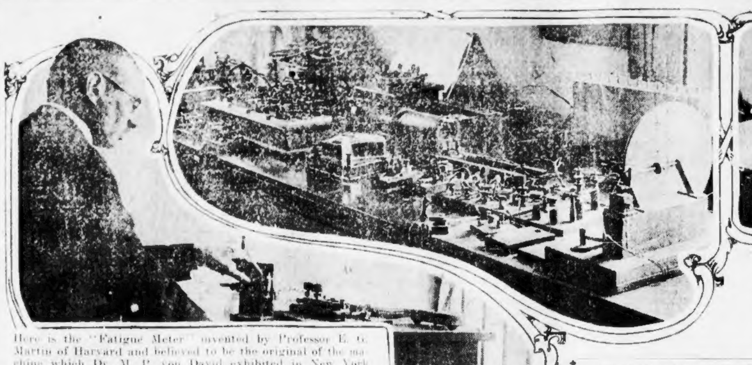
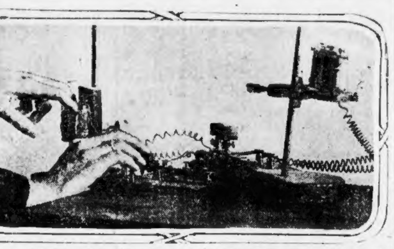
To cool off quickly, enjoy a pleasant stroll, eat a good dinner and see a good show, go to Norumbega Park or Lexington Park.

HARVARD IS MYSTIFIED BY "VOCATION METER"



Here is the "Fatigue Meter" invented by Professor E. G. Martin of Harvard and believed to be the original of the machine which Dr. M. P. Von David exhibited in New York and claimed would test morals and indicate vocations of children. A subject is shown being tested for mental fatigue. The machine registers the smallest amount of electricity which the subject can feel.



Another view of a subject being tested by the machine of Professor Martin.

Professors at Harvard Medical School today are mystified over the claims of Dr. M. P. Von David, of Boston and Newton, who has appeared in New York with an apparatus which he says is designed with reference to making moral and vocational tests of school children.

According to news dispatches, Dr. Von David is connected with Harvard Medical School, and said that associated with him in the experimental work is Professor Ernest G. Martin, author of the system.

An examination today of the Harvard Directory failed to disclose the name of Dr. M. P. Von David as ever having been connected with the university, and no man by that name is now connected with Harvard Medical School. E. G. Martin, professor of physiology, however, has designed apparatus for testing the emotions.

It is thought from the descriptions telegraphed from New York to Boston that Von David has a duplicate of Professor Martin's machine and made claims that it would do things Martin says it will not do—record, for instance, if a person is a criminal, or find out a person's vocation in life.

Just what Von David's object is cannot be learned in Boston.

When he left Boston, Dr. Von David declared he was departing for Germany to claim the estate of an uncle who had been killed in battle. He claimed this estate carries with it the title of baron.

Before leaving he gave out an interview in which he claimed to have tested several hundred Newton school children with his apparatus and by these methods, with excellent results.

Professor Martin today denied emphatically that his experiments or the apparatus he has designed have any bearing whatever on the testing of the morals or vocational leanings of children.

Professor Martin's machine will record the smallest electric shock that can be felt by the person upon whom the experiment is being tried. This is of value in determining the degree of sensitiveness possessed by the subject and is called the "sensory threshold test."

Professor Martin said today: "The apparatus which I have designed will record the smallest electric shock that is felt by the person upon whom we are experimenting. Generally speaking, the smaller the shock the subject can feel the more sensitive he is. It works better for mental fatigue than for physical exhaustion.

"For instance, a brain worker is known to perceive a certain amount of shock when he is in a normal condition. If he has cause to believe he has been overworking, he has but to test himself with the apparatus. If he cannot detect the current he ordinarily can, but has to wait until a larger amount is sent through his body before feeling it, it means he has been overworking.

"If the smallest amount he can first perceive is the smallest amount he first perceives when his body is in a normal condition, then it means his body is still normal and he can still go on with his work. These experiments and apparatus have nothing whatever to do with ascertaining the moral or vocational tendencies of children, nor do I see how they can be of the slightest value for these purposes."

VON DAVID'S CLAIMS.

Meanwhile Dr. Von David is in New York city and the New York Sunday papers ran columns of interviews they had with him about experiments he says he has conducted with regard to ascertaining the moral and vocational tendencies of children.

According to the New York papers, Dr. Von David is the X-ray expert of the Harvard Medical School and the State of Massachusetts, and is in New York for the purpose of interesting the New York State Board of Education in his modern tests for school children.

Dr. Von David said these tests have been applied in many directions, and especially in examining college graduates for the determination of the lines of activity for which they are best adapted and wherein success appears most certain to result from the physical and psychological equipment, according to the X-ray and other showings.

The child to be examined is not told anything of what is going to be done or what it is hoped to find. The age of the child examined is negligible, except that the little one must be able to read. The most positive results are obtained as a rule, Dr. Von David said at the McAlpin, between the ages of fourteen and twenty years. Children much younger than fourteen have been examined in great numbers in Boston and with highly satisfactory results, he asserted.

"Usually the child is only told that the electrical resistance of its body is going to be tested," the scientist said. "The child is told it will not have any pain or any feeling from any of the tests and, of course, there is no pain.

"A room furnished with only a small table and a chair is used. The child enters and is told to be seated beside the table and to rest the right elbow and forearm upon it, with the right hand projecting over the edge, and to dip the first two fingers of that hand into the solutions which fill two jars fastened to the edge of the table.

"In these jars is metallic mercury, used because it furnishes the most perfect physical contact with the skin surface and thereby carries the electrical current reflexes best. The child is left in that room alone. In front and each side of the child are white screens, upon which subsequently the suggestive words are thrown by lantern slides.

"In the adjoining room the operator is seated at a table upon which are the appliances used in the tests. The principal apparatus is first a storage battery, from which a very small amount of current is drawn. This current passes into a coil made of many turns of copper wire and divided into two parts, which are known as the primary and the secondary portions. These coils slide easily one over the other.

"According to the position in which they are placed, certain markings are shown upon a very finely graduated wide rule. These markings correspond to the curve or arc at which the coil is resting at that time. They correspond to certain definite electrical impulses which are the result of sensory reflexes in the child due to the suggestion of the words exhibited before its eyes.

IMPULSES CAUSE CHANGES.

"A word is flashed upon the screen before the child. It is the only significant object in sight of the child. The child's mind acts in some way upon the suggestion given by the meaning of the word. That mental act so changes the internal and external secretions of the child's body as to produce unmistakable psychic reactions that are reflected by variations of the electrical resistance of the child and translated through the apparatus to the operator.

"Though a pencil might be used to record the curves and arcs, continuous and broken, which these reflexes of the child produce in variations of the needle on the scale, pencils that make marks are seldom used. The expert operator does not require them—and all operators in this work must be experts.

BEER SERVED BY HAVERHILL NURSE

him to send you a case of beer? A.—I did.

Q.—About how many patients were at the hospital when you served beer and whiskey? A.—Nine male patients.

Q.—Did Dr. Clarke approve of giving liquor to patients? A.—No.

Q.—Did you report his disapproval to the nurses? A.—I did.

Q.—Therefore the nurses realized they were giving out liquor without the doctor's consent? A.—They did.

Q.—Who is responsible for the beer being passed out? A.—I am responsible for the nurses serving liquor. I gave orders to the nurses to dole out liquor.

Q.—When liquor was about to be served, you made your presence scarce by going upstairs? A.—Yes.

Q.—You didn't care to serve liquor or see it served, did you? A.—No.

Q.—You wanted to escape responsibility? A.—No. That was not exactly my object.

Q.—Was it a shock to your moral conscience to see liquor served? A.—No.

MADE GIFTS OF WHISKEY.

Q.—Why did you go to your room? A.—Because I did not care to see patients receive liquor in my presence.

Q.—About the time liquor was being served out, Dr. Clark happened into the hospital, didn't he? A.—He did.

Q.—You came down stairs and told the nurses the doctor was coming. A.—I did.

Q.—You gave Miss Cook orders to give the patients beer on Christmas eve and to give them what was left, if any, on Christmas Day? A.—I did.

Q.—What was done with the twelve bottles of whiskey you donated on Christmas? A.—I gave seven bottles to patients.

Q.—What became of the other five? A.—I gave one to my father; one to a neighbor in Lynn, one to Miss Cook's brother and one to Mr. Donovan, and one to Miss Langles' father.

Q.—Now about John Croston? You gave him a bottle of whiskey on Christmas? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew the condition of Croston. You knew he has served time for being drunk. You probably realize that his disease is perhaps caused by drink? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you think it a good idea to give him liquor? A.—No.

Q.—Your idea in telling the patients that the doctor was coming was so that they could hide the liquor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you drink any of the liquor yourself? A.—I did not.

Q.—You felt conscious of the wrong going on? A.—Yes.

I WILL GIVE YOU A 50¢ BOX OF FACE POWDER FREE

As Explained Below for Introductory Purposes

I Will Lend You Awhile Free of Charge, My Three Large Courses of Instruction on "HOW TO BECOME BEAUTIFUL, FASCINATING & ATTRACTIVE"

SIXTY years ago women were often faded, wrinkled and old at 25 or 30. But today, with the aid of recent discoveries by great specialists, a woman should look comparatively young at 50.

Age has become largely a question of keeping the muscles of the cheeks from sagging; of warding off the formation of wrinkles and marks of age, and keeping the skin smooth, soft and velvety.

Sagging facial muscles often entirely change the whole contour of a woman's face, giving it an extremely aged look. This is generally what causes friends to exclaim: "How old Mrs. B—— has gotten to look; she is only twenty-eight, but she looks more like forty!"

Incredible as it may seem, you cannot only ward off sagging facial muscles, but even after they have occurred it is possible to revitalize and stimulate them and thereby make one look much younger.

The old, half-dead outer layer of skin is another fruitful cause of an aged look. Not long ago Virgil of Paris found an absolutely safe and harmless process which helps to remove this old, half-dead skin so gradually that you cannot notice the change with the naked eye, permitting the new, fresh skin from underneath to take its place, which thereby greatly enhances the beauty of the complexion.

All the above and scores of other valuable beauty secrets, together with many valuable beauty-making formulas, are fully explained in my three courses of instruction on "HOW TO BECOME BEAUTIFUL, FASCINATING AND ATTRACTIVE."

These courses tell how you may almost instantly give yourself the appearance of being many years younger.

How to make yourself fascinating, charming and attractive.

How to whiten, soften, beautify and refine the skin.

How to beautify your eyebrows and eyelashes and thereby make your eyes more alluring.

How to make your hair beautiful, soft and fluffy and keep it in curl for practically a week at a time.

I will also send you absolutely free six packets containing six different colors of face powder, so that you may select the one best suited to your skin and complexion.

How to overcome a shiny nose.

How you may tell if the face powder or cream that you use is harmful to your skin and complexion; how to apply face powder so as to make it practically invisible and very adherent; how to use rouge so that no one can detect it.

How to give your neck a beautiful appearance; how to tone up a flabby skin; what to do for wrinkles and lines of age.

How to remove freckles and overcome enlarged pores of the nose and face.

How to overcome rough and chapped hands and keep them beautiful, soft and white, even when doing housework.

Methods used for building up sunken cheeks and sagging facial muscles.

How to round out the cheeks by raising the sagging muscles at the sides of the face which give the face a drawn look and make a woman appear so old.

Hints as to what [illegible]. How to acquire a charming personality; how to dress economically and attractively, etc., etc.

I tell you the real secrets which I employed on myself and which were undoubtedly of great assistance to me in winning my two international beauty prizes.

"I consider Poudre Fascination and Poudre Petalias two of my most successful creations. If you wish a beautiful complexion and desire to keep your skin free from wrinkles and marks of age I advise you to try these powders."

Virgil

PARIS.

Both Poudre Fascination and Poudre Petalias are creations of Virgil of Paris, whose name is well known throughout France for his remarkable creations for preserving the beauty and youthful appearance of women and for beautifying their skins and complexions.

MANY ladies have used totally the wrong color and the wrong kind of face powder for years before discovering why they always have a shiny nose, a slick, greasy-looking skin, or a horrid "made-up" appearance.

With the marvelous silk-meshed twin face powders, Poudre Petalias and Poudre Fascination (six colors) you can obtain an individual face powder suited to every complexion and every texture of skin.

Poudre Petalias is a very fine, heavy, adhesive powder, especially for ladies with shiny noses, enlarged skin pores or a greasy, oily or rough skin.

Poudre Fascination is a very fine, light, specially adherent powder that is practically invisible on the skin. For ladies with soft or delicate skin and those who do not want a powder to show.

Many ladies prefer to blend the above powders by mixing them half and half or in other proportions to obtain an individual powder of their own just to suit their skins.

I WILL send you six packets containing six different colors of face powder mentioned above (including lavender, the marvelous new shade for evening use) absolutely free to every lady who writes for my course of instruction. These six packets of powder are free to you to keep and use, no matter whether you desire to keep my courses; let me know and I will send you a regular 50c box of either of the above powders of your own selection to use in connection with my courses of instruction.

Do not decide as to whether you want my courses or not from the short description given in this paper, but send for them and look them over at my expense, then decide. The information you will obtain from reading them and the free six packets of powder which I send you with the courses will certainly far more than compensate you for your trouble in writing. Address Mlle. Simone Mareix, Dept. 780B, 20 West 22d street, New York.

ATTRACTIONS OF THE WEEK FOR PLAYGOERS OF GREATER BOSTON

RICHARD CARLE AT THE MAJESTIC

Richard Carle was greeted with a hearty, old-fashioned Boston welcome last night upon his return to his native heath in a revival with the Lonergan Players of the three-act comedy, "The Dictator," at the Majestic Theatre.

Carle told the story of the New York clubman, who leaves the city after a Broadway escapade and by force of circumstances becomes the head of a revolution in a South American republic, in the unique and agitated way characteristic of Carle. His alert mind interpolated patriotic references to the American navy that stirred the audience of his Boston friends. During the intermission the audience arose and remained standing respectfully while the orchestra was playing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Carle was called before the curtain at the close of the second act. In a brief speech, also characteristic of Carle, he told his fellow Bostonians that if they remained satisfied and the weather continued cold Saturday night would close a good week.

The versatile Lonergan players capably supported the star in his departure from his usual shows of music and girls. Miss Amy Ricard as the modest missionary and Anna Layng as the passionate senora were pleasantly received, as were Eddie Phelan, the wireless operator, and Mr. Lonergan, the consul deposed by Carle. Albert Berg, Tom Whyte, Jack Taylor and Fred Carter skilfully interpreted the evolutionistic characters at Porto Banos, scenes of daily uprisings and overthrows.

Bass Point.

The divers attractions at Bass Point, Nahant, and the excellent shore dinners and attractive menus which the leading hotels there are specializing in, together with the delightful sail down Boston harbor, make this seaside resort one of the most popular in New England. Regular trips at frequent intervals are now being made from Otis wharf, Atlantic avenue, by the steamer General Lincoln, and traffic so far this season has been far in excess of expectations. The diversions at Bass Point include boating, fishing, dancing, vaudeville and motion picture theatres, scenic railways and games of all sorts.

Provincetown Trips.

The season of all-day deep-sea trips to Provincetown from Bay Line wharf, Atlantic avenue, on the steamer Dorothy Bradford of the Cape Cod Line, will be opened Saturday. Passengers on the Dorothy Bradford are afforded an unsurpassed view of the picturesque seashore scenery and the island fortifications, and every convenience for their comfort and safety is provided. Provincetown, "first landing place of the Pilgrims," boasts of many quaint and historic spots which are of great interest to sightseers.

Globe Theatre.

The leading act of the new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday was supplied by Tommie Allen and Walter Ware, with five pretty girls, who presented "Fun in a Seminary." Other features were the Bell Boy trio, the Walsh-Lynch company in "Huckin's Run," and several other new acts.

FRITZI SCHEFF LEADS AT KEITH'S

An exceptionally good bill has been provided for this week at Keith's, including Fritzi Scheff with a bevy of charming songs and an array of fetching garments. Fritzi Scheff is always chic and fascinating, and this season she is none the less so. She charmed a crowded house on the opening night and responded to several encores. The prospect is that, with the most delightful Fritzi as a headliner, together with the other excellent performers, Keith's will have a bumper week.

The "others," many of whom are competent to fill the top of the bill themselves, include Valentine and Bell—here for the first time—as "the furniture removers," and another pair of first timers—Bolger brothers—known as the "banjo kings," who are ripping good players and give a smashing performance.

Walter Leroy, Emily Lytton and Walter Booth, Jr., give a clever little sketch by Junie McCree, entitled "Neighbors."

Leo Beers, who is billed as "the society man," gives a capital entertainment of songs and piano selections. Mr. Beers had a well-merited reception with several encores.

An unusually good number is the dancing team—Clifton Webb and Gloria Goodwin—who entertain exceptionally well in some of the latest steps. They are assisted by a half-dozen members of the famous Russian balalaika orchestra, who play the most delightful sort of unique dance music.

Jim Tooney and Ann Norman furnish a bunch of fun in a quarter of an hour of "Nonsense." Tooney is built like the figure 1 in evening dress. A look is a laugh.

Raymond and Caverley produce some old-fashioned German dialect stuff with a chorus of laughs in it. And Sylvia Loya and Her Pierrot finish the bill with a novel exhibition by her seventy snow-white pigeons. This is a "first time in America" number.

Exeter Street Theatre.

"Fanchon the Cricket," with Mary Pickford, was the feature film in the new bill at the Exeter Street Theatre yesterday. This picture will continue through tomorrow, when "The Moth and the Flame" will be shown.

VARIED BILL AT BOSTON THEATRE

Josef Martin made his Boston debut at the Boston Theatre last evening and promptly made himself a favorite. He proved to be one of the best entertainers ever appearing at popular prices and he gave a most satisfying performance in connection with Caroline B. Nichols and her famous Boston Fadettes. A short recital will be given by Mr. Martin every afternoon and evening just before the picture program.

"Four Feathers," a thrilling war drama, was the photo-play feature. Howard Estabrook took the leading role and was assisted by a large cast. The film vividly portrays British soldiers, Arabs, hundreds of horses and camels and many exciting battle scenes.

"Four Feathers" is adapted from the book by A. E. W. Mason and was popular as a play some years ago. The production is on an enormous scale, and the pictures of life with the Arab caravans in the desert are stirring.

Billie Reeves, the English comedian, appeared in another new comedy entitled "The New Butler." Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford pictures were greeted with applause.

The first three days of the week are shown the fifth instalment of the serial by Gouverneur Morris, "The Goddess," with Earle Williams and Anita Stewart and a splendid cast. The last three days of the week there will be a six-part photo-play, "Beulah," with Henry Walthall, the star of "The Birth of a Nation," and Miss Joyce Moore in the leading roles. "Beulah" is by the author of "St. Elmo."

Modern Theatre.

Marie Corelli's famous novel, "Wormwood," was shown in picture form at the Modern Theatre yesterday. It was the feature of the long program, which contained several interesting picture subjects, not the least of which was the new instalment of "The Goddess."

Orpheum Theatre.

Elsie Gilbert and her romping girls and collies headed the new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. The bill was made up of many novelties that proved popular with the day's audiences.

Tremont Temple.

"With the Fighting Forces of Europe," in Kinemacolor pictures, began its second week in Tremont Temple yesterday. There is no doubt about this being one of the best entertainments in Boston, for it really is a wonderful thing to see the Kaiser and Admiral Von Tirpitz in life-size pictures with the main fleet at Kiel, then [illegible] at Potsdam, the Kaiser and the Crown Prince with the Death Head Hussars, see King Albert and his soldiers and then look at King George of England and Sir John French on the British battle line. That is what really happens in "With the Fighting Forces of Europe," and one is shown the much talked of Zeppelin air ships, the U-9, which sank the Cressy, Hogue and Aboukir in the British seas, and the actual firing of torpedoes, trench building and the largest guns in action.

Paragon Park.

The Broadway Musical Revue, which comprises the cabaret entertainment in the Palm Garden at Paragon Park this season, has scored an instantaneous hit, Manager Dodge being the first to offer this amusement feature in New England. Twenty-five show girls under the direction of Martin Brennan present this novelty of song hits and dancing specialties, and coupled with the dansants the combination is unsurpassed in any dining resort.

Paragon Park has more than its usual number of free attractions this season, including Albert's eight trained polar bears, which perform many marvelous stunts and shoot the chutes from a height of ninety feet into the lagoon.

Pemberton Inn.

Because of its accessibility to both excursionists and motorists, and chiefly because the entertainment there is spirited, Pemberton Inn is an ideal place for a day's or evening's outing. The cabaret at Pemberton Inn is presented by acknowledged leaders and includes Art Spaulding, Edna Lander, Mlle. Camilla, Miss Sawyer and the Bostonian Quartet. Music for the cabaret and the dansants, which are held in a cleared space among the tables, is provided by the Banjo Band.

St. James Theatre.

The top of the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday was allotted to the Joe Boganny troupe of "Lunatic Bakers." This was an acrobatic act of more than passing merit, alive with comedy. The balance of the bill was made up of new vaudeville features.

'WITHIN THE LAW' AT CASTLE SQUARE

"Within the Law," a four-act melodrama by Bayard Veiller, which ran such a long run in Boston last year and the one in which Jane Cowl starred, was produced by the Craig Players at the Castle Square Theatre last evening before a large and well pleased audience.

The story deals with a saleswoman, Mary Turner, in a large store in New York, who is falsely accused of theft and sent to prison for three years.

She declares her innocence and while on her way to jail urges Edward Gilder, owner of the store, to give his employes living wages so that they can live straight. He refuses to listen to her. She swears she will "get even" with him.

When the second act opens she has served her full term. She tries to live honestly but finds it impossible and is about to commit suicide when she is saved by a man who proves to be a crook. She goes into partnership with him and a "confidence" woman. They make thousands of dollars by swindling people but still keep within the law.

Miss Turner meets young Gilder, son of the millionaire store head, and he becomes infatuated with her. She marries him, not for love, but for revenge of the father.

The story reaches its climax at the end of act three, when Gilder and his wife are found in the living room of Gilder's home, with "English Eddie," a crook, lying dead on the floor. The pair are arrested, but are freed when Joe Garson, the crook in business with the girl, confesses to the crime. She finds that she really does love young Gilder.

William P. Carleton took the part of young Gilder and acted well. Miss Doris Olsson was a very effective Mary Turner.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Birth of the Nation" continues at the Tremont Theatre, where large audiences are still the rule. This massive picture drama of the Civil War and reconstruction days is doubtless the biggest motion picture production ever made.

Park Theatre.

In the new bill at the Park Theatre yesterday Mary Pickford was again seen in a dual-role play, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." This was a five-part picturization of Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous play, and in the role of Glad Miss Pickford gave renewed evidence of her wonderful charm. Charlie Chaplin was also seen in a new comedy, while other features were the Paramount travel series and special musical numbers.

"THE GODDESS" By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

([illegible])

"WHY, Freddie, what are you doin' hereabouts?"

"Dunno," said Freddie. "What you doin', O'Gorman?"

"Me? I'm looking for a beautiful young lady in a white dress with a band of jewels across her forehead."

Freddie laughed aloud.

"Another!" he exclaimed. "What do you get if you find her?"

"I get a good bit, Freddie, and any one that finds her for me and tells me first gets half of it."

"I can find her," said Freddie.

"You've done queer things. Well, if you do, it's a go. You take me to her and we'll share and share alike."

Then Freddie went down to see if Celestia was still there. She was. He had almost walked his legs off, but he was still game. So he went and fetched Sweetzer and showed Celestia to him through a crack in the door.

"How'll I get her?"

"Tomorrow at ten Nelly and ma'll be at work, pa's going to a meetin', and I heard her say she'd stay at home and do work."

Not without difficulty Freddie collected the $50 which Sweetzer had promised him. With even more difficulty he wrote a note to Tommy Barclay, to Mrs. Baxter and to O'Gorman.

He wrote: "Be at my house (and he gave an address) at a few minutes before 10 o'clock, and I'll take you to her.

Freddie the Ferret.

P. S.—Bring the money you promised or I won't."

All Freddie's victims except Sweetzer met in part of Freddie's house at a little before 10 o'clock. One glance at O'Gorman was enough for Sweetzer. He knew that he had lost out and he slunk off, cursing.

Freddie opened the front door and said:

"Walk in."

They walked in. Then he showed them into the parlor, and there was Celestia.

But she wouldn't go away with Tommy and O'Gorman had no authority to take her away.

"That's up to the professor," he said.

But when Stilliter found that she was with good people and wouldn't go with Tommy he was contented to let matters rest where they were, as you shall read.

Celestia's real work had begun. Often upon the lips of the elder Douglas, and always in his heart, was the belief that Celestia was divinely inspired and of divine origin. He would tolerate no other theory from any one. To Celestia's theory of a world reform he listened devoutly and in a humble way.

Mrs. Douglas and Nelly also believed that Celestia had come from heaven. Freddie, however, knew better. He knew that she came from Mrs. Baxter's, but for some reason or other he did nothing to spread his knowledge. And indeed in his own way he began to worship her.

Friends and acquaintances of the Douglas family came to the home out of curiosity and remained to listen and to wonder. Her effect upon these simple-minded folk was extraordinary. They asked no questions. Her word seemed to them the last word. But when they carried that word to others who had not seen her it was not so convincing always. It was her eyes more than her logic that won minds to her way of thinking.

She looked no longer like a Greek goddess, but like a simple working girl. And yet she remained magically lovely to look at and commanding.

Stilliter, after ten minutes' talk with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas (during a short absence of Celestia), concluded that she could not be in better hands. Indeed it had been in a similar family that he had intended to place her.

"She says," said Douglas, "that every man jack of us ought to have a real share in the country. That we must treat misery and poverty not as necessary evils, but as epidemics, and stamp 'em out. And I tell you the man who runs on that platform will get a heap of votes in this district. Nobody ever tries to argue with her. You just listen and believe."

Stilliter reported to Barclay and the other members of the triumvirate. And those who had begun to lose faith in Celestia once more became enthusiastic.

"Don't hurry her any," said Barclay. "Let her doctrines spread from the house she's living in, slowly and naturally, until she has a real following. Then when we do begin to advertise her it will be more effective and cheaper."

Heroes of Wood and Air

Some of the Smallest Animals and Birds Have Stout Hearts

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I WAS reading recently in an English paper an account of a man attacked by weasels. Walking along a road he saw a weasel run into an old stone wall by the wayside. He poked about the hole with his cane and immediately, to his terror, a score of weasels rushed out and began to run up his legs and body, trying to get at his throat! The suddenness and unexpectedness of the attack unnerved him and he fought wildly and desperately, partly losing the advantage of his height and his possession of a weapon, through his lack of cool self-command. According to the story, he would probably have lost his life, but for the fortunate arrival of a carter, who assailed the weasels with a whip, and thus put them to flight.

I do not doubt this story is authentic, for weasels are, notoriously, the most courageous of animals. Their fearlessness has often been proved. They will attack horses and cattle, and they do not, like other wild animals, show any dread of man, but will live in his neighborhood with perfect indifference and lack of fear. They have the terrifying habit of making straight for the neck of an enemy, or a victim, and instantly tearing at the main arteries.

Moreover they often seem to kill from pure lust of killing. As pursuers they are more relentless than bloodhounds, following their quarry, like dogs, by scent. They drive woodchucks, which are a dozen or twenty times their size, from their holes and take possession for themselves. Smaller burrowing animals, of course, cannot maintain their ground for a moment against the attack of weasels. Such creatures simply fly, in the utmost terror, content if their lives are left to them. To watch the rapid, fierce, remorseless onset of a weasel, instantaneously flooding the field of struggle with the lifeblood of its victim, produces a qualm in a sensitive beholder. The arrowy little beast seems to be the very imp of the spirit of murder.

Yet even the weasel, as the story with which I began shows, gathers courage from the stimulus of the crowd. A dozen weasels together will attack a foe that a single one would avoid, unless cornered. This reliance upon numbers, which we find in all parts of the animal world, is a significant phenomenon. Man, of course, is subject to it, but with him it appears to be a result of reason, although, probably, it is much more a mere instinct than we suspect.

The most timid of animals become courageous when they go in bands. A flock of small birds will chase a crow or a hawk and drive him out of a field or away from a farm. Trusting to their numbers they will attack him at close quarters, buffeting him with their wings, pecking at him with their beaks, blinding and confusing him with their multitudinous rushes, and keeping up such a bedlam of cries and screams that the noise alone upsets the enemy. Yet one good blow from the hawk would instantly slay any of his diminutive tormentors.

The wolf has the reputation of being a great coward when he is alone, but hunting in bands he knows his advantage and attacks enemies far stronger than himself without hesitation. We get a good deal of light on the nature of that quality which we call courage by considering it as it manifests itself among the lower animals.

We see that it is usually the result of some stronger instinct overcoming the instinct of fear, which is nature's invisible shield for life.

Among the instincts that are stronger than fear is that one called mother-love. Here, in illustration, is a story of a cat. A hawk swooped down into a barnyard and seized a kitten which, with its sisters, was playing about its mother. Before the hawk could rise with its prey the mother attacked it. The aggressor had to drop the kitten to defend himself, and a terrific fight ensued. The hawk had pecked out one of the cat's eyes and tore off a part of one of her ears. But she would not break ground. On the contrary, she pressed the fighting. At last she succeeded in breaking one of her enemy's powerful wings. Thereupon she closed in, held the hawk to the ground, and, after a long struggle, killed it.

Another cat that was carried off one morning by an eagle in the Highlands of Scotland returned to her master's house in the evening, pushed open the door and mewed for milk. She had evidently made a long journey, but her adventures could only be guessed at.

Rabbits, seemingly the most timid of animals, are credited with exhibiting heroic courage when defending their young.

A Canine Curiosity

A timid little girl looking out of the nursery window called to her mother: "Mother, mother! Here is a wild dog!" Her mother went to the window. "Oh, no, that dog is not wild," she said; "he belongs to the man across the street, and is a nice dog!" The child pondered the matter for a time. "Well," she said then, "his head may not be wild, but his tail is!"

WOUNDS OF VANITY

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"MY husband has many faults," said a wife to me, "but he has never looked at another woman."

By "looking," she meant admiring or paying attention to any woman but herself, I supposed.

"Such 'looking' would be an unpardonable sin in your eyes?" I asked.

"It certainly would!" she replied emphatically—"It would be exactly that."

I knew that her husband was not an easy man to live with, that he was sometimes cross and moody, that he was not always strictly temperate—indeed, that he was lacking in many of the attributes that go to the making of a gentleman. Yet she could forgive all of these. The one thing she would not have forgiven would be the "looking at another woman."

"Marital infidelity would be hard to pardon," I remarked. "Do you mean that is an offence you could never condone?"

"What woman could?" she returned. "But that was not what I meant. I meant that George has never since our marriage shown the slightest admiration for any woman but me, that he has never flirted a bit, that he has never talked silly nonsense to anybody. "If," her face flushing, "I caught him doing any of those things—well, I would never forgive him!—and I am always watching to be sure that he doesn't do them. One can't trust men in such matters."

Words spoken in my hearing some years ago by a young husband flashed into my mind. "I used to think," he said, "that to admire any woman but one's own wife was an awful offence, that to make love to anybody else was a sin. But it is evidently a sin to which my wife, who loves me, I know, fancies I might stoop. It has been hard for me to maintain my preconceived opinion of the evil of such practices since I find that she thinks me capable of them. Were I less strong in my principles, I might almost feel that I might as well have the game as the name."

That was, as I have said, some years ago. Now he has both the name and the game. Is the blame altogether his? Did not the wife, by her suspicions, put into his mind the suggestion that it would be possible for him to perpetrate the follies she feared? Would he not have been more constant to her had he shown that she trusted him?

I wonder this often as I see husbands and wives making themselves wretched with suspicion of each other. Such suspicions are so futile that one marvels that sane human beings indulge in them.

For, after all, what good are they? As one Irishman expresses it, "What do they get a body?"

I wish I could make wives understand that no man was ever kept from wrongdoing by surveillance or espionage. All the watching in the world will not make a man faithful if he determines to be unfaithful. Moreover, the knowledge that his wife is suspecting him will lessen his love for her and make him feel justified in eluding her vigilance.

But, looking deeper still, can a woman become a spy upon the actions of the man she has married and yet retain her self-respect? I doubt it.

I may be entirely wrong, but I do not think that a woman can read a letter sent to her husband, and intended for his eyes alone, and not sink to the level of the man who is attempting to deceive her. He is cheating her; she is cheating him. He is deceiving her; she is deceiving him. He is pretending fidelity to her, yet carrying on a clandestine correspondence with another woman; the wife pretends that she is open and honorable in her dealings with him, and at the same time is pilfering letters from his pockets and reading that which is his and his alone.

Her sin is not as great as his—but it is the same kind of a sin—only varying from his in quantity.

What, then, is the wife to do who suspects her husband?

First of all, she can try to trust him, and can let him feel that she trusts him. In all this matter we are not dealing with the wife whose husband has been criminally unfaithful—only with the wife of the man whose vanity is touched by the flattery of clever women and who likes to be popular with the fair sex.

If the wife can show him that attentions from other women do not hurt her and that she believes that nobody can really shake him from his allegiance to her, she is pretty sure of holding his affection. If not, it is not worth holding.

It is his vanity, not his heart, that is affected. And one reason a wife resents her husband's admiration of other women is that such admiration wounds her own vanity a little.

For, after all, in the matter of being vain there is really not much to choose between the sexes.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

The mistress came downstairs and tried the door of the sitting room, only to find it locked against her, while the key, which was usually in the lock, was missing.

"Bridget, I can't get into the sitting room," she cried.

"Shure, it's meself knows that, an' ye won't, for I hav th' kay in me pocket."

"Open the door immediately."

"Will yez go in if I do?"

"Certainly I will."

"Then yez won't get the kay."

"Open the door, I say. What do you mean?"

"Sure, it's by your own orders. Just yesterday ye said, 'Don't let me come downstairs in the morning an' see any dust on the sitting-room furniture.' So I just puts the kay in me pocket, an' says I, 'Then she shan't!'"

The shades of the goose and turkey were discussing the circumstances which had attended their respective deaths.

"Did you offer any objection when first the cruel farmer laid hands on you?" sympathetically inquired the gobbler.

"Yes," replied his gooseship; "I cried out, 'Hallo! what's this?'"

"What did you say next?" inquired the now thoroughly interested turkey, as the other paused for a moment.

"Oh," the goose replied, "I did not say anything more just then; I was wrung off."

Most old men have some pet platitude. Brown was no exception. "Patience and perseverance will accomplish all things," was his favorite saying.

One day when he made this remark in a train a pompous individual in the farther corner turned to him crossly and said:

"Nonsense, sir! Will patience and perseverance ever enable me to carry water in a sieve?"

"Do you want to carry water in a sieve?" asked Brown.

"That's not the point, sir. What I asked was: Will patience and perseverance enable me to do it?"

"Certainly, my dear sir," replied Brown. "If you can wait patiently for the water to freeze!"

The bridal couple received a striking salutation from a Quaker friend of the bridegroom's, a shrewd dry goods merchant. Presented by an usher, he surveyed the bride, whom he had never seen before, and then, with the utmost deliberation, proceeded to say:

"William, I think thy bride has shown more judgment in her choice than thou hast."

Fortunately, before the newly-married man could turn to resent this strange salutation, he continued as follows:

"Because it takes some penetration to discover thy good qualities, but hers can be seen at a glance."

This Liquid Attacks Hair Under the Skin

To gain control of coarse, bristly growths which have been caused by the unwise use of pastes, rub-on preparations and other things which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin, you must use De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover. Art de la Mode says: De Miracle is "the best method." Only publications of the highest character are named by us. Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from so-called magazines which do not exist.—Advertisement.

Doctor Tells How to Shed Bad Complexion

We cannot restore devitalized facial tissue any more than we can restore a lost limb. It is useless to attempt to correct a worn-out complexion [illegible]. The rational procedure is to remove the complexion itself—remove the devitalized cuticle. [illegible] mercolized wax [illegible] absorb the offending cuticle. [illegible] a new, youthful skin appears, soft and delicate [illegible] as a rose petal.

No lady need hesitate to try this. Procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the druggist's. Spread on a thin layer before retiring, removing this in the morning with soap and water. In from one to two weeks the complexion is completely renewed.

An excellent treatment for wrinkles is provided by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings prompt and remarkable results.—Dr. K. Mackenzie in Popular Medicine. —Advertisement.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

"GO away!" pleaded Crawley. "I ask it of you! For Heaven's sake, go away and leave me!"

"Not I," bluffly replied Brooke. "Not until I leave you in proper charge. You aren't fit to be left with less than two keepers." He laughed boisterously. He was so relieved to find that it was nothing worse than that Zoe again. What a silly young fool Noel was. "Well, my son," he went on, "and what does your Zoe say now—eh? Been scaring you again with her hysteria? Law! Crawley, you ought to have more sense. Women like that ought to be locked up, to keep 'em from annoying respectable, impressionable young artists. What did you do to her? I know what I'd have done. I'd have frog-marched her downstairs to the nearest policeman and given her in charge. Pshaw! Women like that are pests! They ought to be stamped out!"

Brooke crushed an imaginary Zoe under his heel and swore a loud, resonant oath.

Crawley raised his hand again. "Stop!" he gasped. "You don't know what you're saying. She is dead—dead, Brooke!"

"Dead!" A sudden quiet came into Brooke's voice. He had not expected this. Then, as if to stifle the momentary feeling of what he considered sentiment which rose in his great, grim heart, he muttered gruffly: "Dead, is she? Humph! And the best thing, too! Women like that"——

"Stop!" cried Crawley. "You shall not speak like that of her here. Heavens, man, do you understand?"

Brooke started, and looked at him keenly.

"You mean that"—— He stopped.

"She has carried out her threat!" Crawley said wildly, regardless now of what he said or what happened. "She killed herself!"

"Whew! When was this?"

"Tonight!"

"So! And where?"

"Here — here, man!" whispered Crawley. "Here in my studio!"

"Heavens!" muttered Brooke, suddenly sobered. And then he reverently bared his head.

A profound silence fell between the two men. Crawley pressed his white shaking hand to his throbbing brows and then groaned aloud.

BROOKE WONDERS WHAT IS TO BE DONE

"Let's go in and talk it over," said Brooke.

"And his deep-toned voice sounded hoarse. He had gone pale—a pallor that showed beneath the tan.

"You'd better not," said Crawley earnestly. "You don't understand. Please, please go away, man! You can do no good. Nobody can do any good. Go away. It is much better!"

"Rot!" ejaculated the traveller, plunging his hands deep into his trousers pockets. "I'm not the man to desert a pal when he's in a hole, and you, my dear chap, are in a pretty deep hole. Confound it! What is to be done?"

"There is nothing to be done," groaned the artist. "I'm just done for—that's all, and the sooner I summon up pluck to face it and do the strong thing, the better."

Brooke gave the younger man a very keen and scrutinizing glance; then he shook his head and forced his way, despite Crawley's protests, into the hall.

"Look here, sonny; we've got to face it!" he growled. "There's no good in funking it. There never was and never will be anything that can happen to a man in his life that he is not capable of dealing with if he only keeps his head and sits tight. I'm going to stand by you, sonny; so buck up! Good heavens! this isn't the first thing that has knocked me a bit sideways at first that I have gone through, and in all probability it won't be the last!"

Crawley stared at the strong man helplessly. Brooke awed him—inspired him. For the moment he forgot that it was Brooke's wife who lay there, dead; forgot that if Brooke knew the truth he would kill him like a dog; forgot everything save the strong, forceful personality of the great man.

"Where—where is it?" asked Brooke.

"In the studio," murmured Crawley, with a shudder.

"Good! We'll go into your room, here. Anybody know yet?"

Crawley shook his head.

"Hutton's out," he said.

"When do you expect him back?"

"Not till after midnight."

"That's right!" said Brooke grimly, glancing at his watch. "We've got plenty of time. Now let me think. We haven't any time to lose, but for all that we mustn't get flurried. We must consider."

TEUTONIC ARMIES CLOSING IN ON LEMBERG, GALICIAN CAPITAL

VIENNA, June 8.—The occupation of Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, by the Austro-German forces, is expected before the end of the present week. Steady progress is being made by the two armies which are converging upon Lemberg from the West and South. It is reported that the Austro-German armies are about ready to begin a bombardment of the Russian forts defending the city. These works have been greatly strengthened by the Russian General Staff since the Russian army of occupation seized the city.

BERLIN, June 8.—Victory [illegible] ing Austro-German arms all along the line in the eastern theatre of war. In the Baltic provinces of Russia the German forces which crossed the Windau River are advancing.

In southern and western Poland attempts of the Russians to renew the offensive in order to relieve the Austro-German pressure in Galicia are being successfully repulsed, according to advices from the front.

The Russian army on the San River has had its progress effectually checked by the arrival of German reinforcements west of Rudnik, and the Slavs are officially reported to have evacuated Sieniawa.

It is declared that the whole Russian campaign is on the verge of collapse. The Austro-German armies advancing toward Lemberg are upon the point of investing the city. The tactics pursued toward Lemberg are the same as those used against Przemysl.

Teutonic forces are working to take the fortress upon two sides at once. Along the Dniester River, south of Lemberg, and on the Bukowina frontier the Russians are said to be retiring.

The Teutonic successes in the East are the result of the most terrific efforts yet made against the Russians by the Germans and Austrians. All available men, arms and ammunition have been poured into that theatre.

GERMANS INCREASE PRESSURE ON CZAR'S LINES IN POLAND

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 8.—Violent fighting between the Germans and Russians is developing in Poland. In northern Poland, north of Ostrolenka, between the Rozoga and Skwa rivers, the Germans are struggling to renew their offensive. Farther to the south in the region of Prasnysz a great artillery duel has developed.

Official reports indicate that the Russians have begun to press hard against Field Marshal Von Hindenberg's German forces in Poland to offset the Austro-German pressure in Galicia.

The Russian War Office, in an official communique today, admits that the Austro-German forces of General Von Linsengen have forced a crossing of the Dniester south of Lemberg.

Fate of Doris Pettingill as Vote Warning

Doris May Pettingill, a seventeen-year-old girl who worked in the mangling room of a Methuen laundry, found it impossible to live on $4 a week and drowned herself in the river.—From news item in yesterday's AMERICAN.

By MRS. GERTRUDE F. LEONARD

Chairman Executive Committee, Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage League.

The end of poor little Doris Pettingill is pathetic. It is a sad commentary on economic conditions due to a male monopoly of suffrage and lawmaking.

If women had the right to vote such conditions would not exist. Improved working conditions and pay for women and girls would be made compulsory. We in Massachusetts would benefit, as are the women in other States where they have the privilege of voting and have a voice in the vital things that affect the public weal.

This little worker went to her death in the river bottom because she did not have a living wage. Countless others like her are struggling on, improperly nourished, impaired in health, without hope of release of what amounts to a bondage.

Equal suffrage will offer a remedy. Doris Pettingill clearly was a girl of most exemplary character, hard working and pious. She must have been a girl of strong moral fibre. Many girls would have sacrificed their honor, but Miss Pettingill preferred death.

What a story of suffering is back of her act. Of course she could not have been normal. She was possibly half-starved and too depressed mentally to think of any other course, to ask for aid. Her father having left her mother before the birth of Doris there was created an element of tragedy which undoubtedly had its effect on the girl's life and temperament and when her mother passed away Doris' last prop fell.

No doubt she was retiring and felt there was nobody left who cared for her. Frail and industrious, she wore herself out in body and mind, struggling against obstacles too great for one so young, so sensitive and lonely. The world and its industrial demands and economic standards were too much for little Doris to understand.

What her shattered life needed was sympathy.

What [illegible] laws that would supply that sympathy or at least supply her with her rights. She deserved more pay. She deserved more recognition. She was a struggling creature, one in thousands, and nobody cared.

What do men voters and lawmakers know of the multiple burdens of a girl or woman toiler? What provisions can be made by persons without knowledge? How can the problems be met and overcome by those who cannot grasp or appreciate all the delicacies that only a woman can comprehend?

Authorities differ as to the causes for immorality among women. Some contend that low wages are not the agency most responsible for the downfall of women and girls. For my part I think while inadequate pay may not be the chief cause, it is a strong contributory cause.

Massachusetts and her people should take heed from the tragic fate of Doris Pettingill. There are thousands of girls like her in plights every bit as pitiable. What is to be done to save them? It is a big industrial and economic question, and we claim suffrage will help tremendously.

GAVE LONG YEARS TO HEBREW WORK

Following a service of eleven years as president of the Hebrew Benevolent Association, Simon Vorenberg has retired. Harry [illegible] has been elected his successor. The other officers elected for the year are: Vice-president, Max E. Wyzanski; treasurer, Meyer H. [illegible]; financial secretary, Sidney S. Conrad; recording secretary, Abraham K. Pinanski; superintendent, Mrs. H. H. Silverman.

Members of the association who met at the Elysium Club to hear the reports of the association gathered around Mr. Vorenberg to congratulate him upon his long service in the interests of this charitable organization.

Mr. Vorenberg, in speaking of his work, said:

"My first office consisted of two small rooms, and at that they were shared by the free employment bureau in the basement opposite our present location. Max Mitchell was then superintendent and our whole staff consisted of an assistant, who was cook, cook and bottle washer, and who served as stenographer, bookkeeper, visitor and clerk for the employment bureau.

"Shortly after taking the reins of office I recognized the growing work and the need of more commodious quarters, and then we secured the opposite rooms. [illegible] We fitted them as well as we could for the time being and from time to time, slowly but surely, we improved the workings of our office. I might say right here that almost everything in connection with charity had its birth in the Hebrew Benevolent Association, and today I will repeat what I said years ago: 'This association compares very favorably with the great big wholesale department stores, because it is so far-reaching. It has so many departments. It alleviates so many ills and pains and in so many different directions.'"

THIN FOR YEARS

"Gains 22 Pounds in 23 Days"

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 23 days."

"Sargol has just put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 132 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 144 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have taken medicine every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have felt in twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Thin Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as thousands of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd give most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim, "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to stay thin." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh on hundreds who doubted, and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump from its use. You just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows vanish and your figure round out to pleasing normal proportions. You weigh yourself when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the food you eat for the purpose of separating all of its flesh producing ingredients. It prepares these fat-making elements in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

If you want a beautiful and well-rounded figure of symmetrical proportions, if you want to gain some solid pounds of healthy stay-there flesh, if you want to increase your weight to normal, weigh what you should weigh, go straight to your druggist today and get a package of Sargol and use it as directed. Sargol will either increase your weight or it won't and the only way to know is to try it. A single package of Sargol easily enables you to make this test. Sixty days' use of Sargol, according to directions, is absolutely guaranteed to increase your weight to a satisfactory degree or your druggist will refund all the money you have paid him for it. Sargol is sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Boston and vicinity by

"I GET $26,000 FOR THIS STORY OF MY LIFE"

It Tells How I Won the Championship as a Teetotaller; How I Came to Be a Fighter; How All My Life Has Been a Period of Training, Through Clean, Wholesome Living, for the Goal I Have Won; The Championship, Which Stands for Physical Fitness

JESS WILLARD

(Copyright [illegible])

I GOT less than $7,000 for whipping Jack Johnson.

I am getting $26,000 in one lump for being a teetotaler.

The AMERICAN'S representative told me plainly that they were buying my story because I had never tasted whiskey.

Had I been a drinking man they would not have bought it at any price.

If I needed proof that it pays to keep away from saloons, this contract furnishes it.

Apart from the fact that I was able to thrash Johnson without much trouble because I had not poisoned myself with drink, my being a sober champion instead of a drunken champion gives me $26,000 at the very start.

There are thousands of men who have made just as big sums for the same good reason.

To tell the truth, temperance has been the boss thing in my whole life. Not only did it help me win the championship, but it was the chief reason why I took up fighting as a business.

A lot of people think I just jumped into the ring and that my success is due to luck. There isn't any such thing. "Good luck" is another name for staying on the job, and hard luck is almost always drink or laziness.

It took me six months to decide to be a fighter. When the idea first came to me I was twenty-four years old, my fighting business was good and I had a wife and children. Even if I had been without common sense, my duty to my family would have kept me from jumping into a game where I had no chance to win.

To begin with, I figured that my height, weight and strength gave me natural advantages over any man in the ring. Then there was my speed, for in spite of my size I could run like a deer, and there was never an Indian that could show me his heels. On top of these things I put down the good solid fact that I had never touched a drop of whiskey in my life, never smoked and never sowed any wild oats.

That was what I counted on most. I knew that there wasn't a single part of my body that had ever been weakened by dissipation. I knew that my heart, lungs and legs would never go back on me and that I had the staying powers of a buffalo bull.

All that I needed was boxing skill. Could I manage to learn enough cleverness to make full use of my six feet six inches, my long arms and my speed? I couldn't see any reason why not. I wasn't a fool, and my brain had never been dulled by whiskey and tobacco. Nor my will power.

When I made up my mind at last that I had a chance, it was the championship I headed for. I figured that I might as well try for the big thing instead of the little. It doesn't take any more trouble, and a fellow bucks up more when the job's big.

"Champion of the world."

For four years I worked, ate and slept with those words ringing before me like some old bell in the dark. They kept my courage up when everybody laughed at me as the worst of the white hope jokes, they made me peg away when I had sent my last dollar home to my wife and the babies and did not have the price of a bed, and they sent em into the ring at Havana as confident as though I was putting on the gloves with a trainer.

"Champion of the world!"

I looked on each fight as a stepping stone. When I lost one I worked harder. When I won I worked harder still. In the days of my broncho busting I noticed that a rider began to go back when he started to feeling that he was "good."

As early as the third round in the Johnson fight I knew that my dream was coming true.

His most terrific jolts to my heart and jaw didn't daze me or fog my eyes for the slightest second.

The clinches didn't make me breathe a bit faster. It seemed to me that I could go a hundred rounds without losing my wind or my strength.

It wasn't that way with Johnson. He was calling on his reserves from the start. Not that he hadn't trained, for he had. But all the training in the world couldn't put back into his body the things that he had wasted.

Training isn't a matter of a few weeks with sparring partners. It's the business of a whole life that a fellow must do by himself.

Poor Jack! I was actually sorry for him in the ring. Better than any one he knew [illegible]

In nearly all barrooms you will find pictures of famous fighters, ball players and other great athletes, put there for the patrons to admire. But to the patrons they should be warnings, for none of the athletes at the time they were at the top of their profession could drink whiskey and still excel. When they started to go back, in the majority of cases it was dissipation that caused it. Yet men will stand at the bar telling about some old champion: "Yes, he was a bear till the booze got him," and emphasizing his remarks with a highball in his hand, for he is too dull to see the warning in what happened to the other man and apply it to himself. —HAL COFFMAN

ONLY 25 DAYS TO WIN TOURS

It's now only a matter of DAYS in the American's California Tours Contest and it will soon be a matter of hours

The surest evidence that the race for the twenty-five Tours to the Pacific Coast is rapidly nearing its end is the feverish interest of the hundreds of candidates who are devoting every minute of their spare time to securing SUCCESS in the competition

Tomorrow Series "E" will come to an end and on Thursday the first coupon in Series "F" will be printed. There will, as usual, be 15 coupons in the "F" series, but only 9 in the following series "G."

The difference between SUCCESS and FAILURE will be the difference between work—active, enthusiastic, vote-gathering work and dilly-dallying in the next 25 days.

And no matter how hard you work, no matter how many weary hours are spent in collecting the all-important vote coupons in the next 25 days—THE TOURS DE LUXE WILL WELL REPAY THE WINNERS FOR THEIR TIME AND TROUBLE

Another vote standing will be printed in next Sunday's American. It will contain a record of all votes polled in Series "A," "B" and "C." Series "D" standing will appear in the Sunday American one week later.

Candidates should remember that over-confidence is as bad as lack of confidence. The leaders in next Sunday's "standing" may be the tail enders when [illegible] are counted—the tail-enders may be the ones to bear off the prizes.

It's merely a matter of how active you are in the next twenty-five days

HARVARD CREWS WORK AT RED TOP

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 8.—Red Top has been officially opened for the annual training of the Harvard crews. The crews arrived and took possession and no time was lost, as in ten minutes after their arrival they were on the river taking their first practice, which consisted of six-mile paddles, coached by James Wray and Robert F. Herrick from the launch "Pup."

The conditions were perfect, a slight shower fell, but the river was like a mill pond and ebbing fast. There was no fast work done, the paddles being in the nature of a workout. No changes in the crews except Harwood resumed his old seat at four in the first boat.

Wadsw Busk of the second crew brought an Irish terrier with him to act as mascot for the crew. There is no danger of his meeting the fate of Charlie Higginson's goat, that was stolen last year before delivery, as the Harvard and Yale management got together and mutually agreed to "cut it out" this year.

After dinner, Captain Murray talked to the crews on routine. He told the men he expected them to eat four meals a day, to arise at seven, and the freshmen to retire at nine and the varsity at 9:30. The morning row will be at 10 o'clock and last an hour. Examinations 11:30 to 2:30; then dinner and rest until about 6 o'clock, when the crews get their hardest work.

Alger and Butler Draw.

GLOUCESTER, June 8.—George Alger of Cambridge and Walter Butler of Revere fought a 12-round draw at the Lenox A. C. Bob Stanley of Boston knocked out Battling Peters of Gloucester in two rounds. Jack Williams and Young Tim, both of Gloucester, fought a four-round draw.

WHITE AND THOMAS CLASH IN BOUT AT ATLAS A. A. TONIGHT

ATLAS A. A. PROGRAM.

Charley White, Chicago, vs. Charley Thomas, Philadelphia, twelve rounds.

Patsy DeLucca, North End, vs. Johnny Glover, South Boston, eight rounds.

Tommy McFarland, North End, vs. Eddie Flynn, Lynn, six rounds

George Brooks, Lowell, vs. Willie Green, South Boston, six rounds.

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLEY WHITE, who pastimes in the lightweight boxing division, will make an effort to grab off a couple of French ring titles at the Atlas A. A. tonight. The Chicago puncher is scheduled to battle Charley Thomas in a twelve-round skirmish, and be it known that the honorable Quaker lad is the gallant featherweight and lightweight champion of France. Thomas' idea of nothing to do is to make a trip to Europe and capture a couple of boxing championships.

White has been made a heavy favorite in the betting for this evening's tussle. This is only natural, as Charles is one of the most prominent young lightweights in captivity. He is just as effective in winning whirls within the hemp ropes as one Don Carlos Ragan is in kicking in with victories for the scrappy Braves.

THIS evening's combat has aroused considerable interest among fistic lovers. There are few boxers who are as popular as White with local ring lovers. The Windy City youth has already engaged in two matches at the Atlas Club and he won both of them. He knocked out Eddie Murphy in seven rounds, while it only took three frames in which to dispose of Freddy Yelle of Taunton.

White looked like a million dollar bet in both of these contests, and the wise men figure that he will not experience much trouble in beating Thomas. Some of the young men with the elevated brows even go so far as to assert that Thomas will hit the canvas after a few sessions of boxing. We will be in a better position to tell whether said Solomans are correct when it is time for the life-saving stations around town to close tonight.

WE have never seen Thomas in action, but he comes here with a swell record. He has already fought White once. The contest was held in Philadelphia last March and honors were even after six rounds of fighting. White hit his opponent often enough, but he was unable to make the Quaker lad give an inch of ground. Thomas kept fighting at top speed all of the time and was in good condition when the dear old chimes sounded at the end of the final chapter. White, on the other hand, was a tired boxer and did not leave his corner for more than five minutes after the final shot had been fired.

THOMAS has also met other star boxers. He made things mighty interesting for Johnny Kilbane and Johnny Dundee, and neither of these men were ever accused of being second-raters.

White is a wonderful boxer, but he is not unbeatable in a twelve round bout. "Young" Shugrue defeated White. So did Jimmy Duffy, Johnny Griffiths, Jack Britton and one or two others. Therefore is cannot well be said that Thomas has not a chance to make a creditable showing against the Westener tonight. White should win, but he probably will not have things all his own way as he did in his contests with Murphy and Yelle provided that Thomas comes up to expectations.

THERE will be a well balanced card of preliminary bouts. Patsy DeLucca of the North End will exchange blows with Johnny Glover of South Boston in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. Tommy McFarland of the North End will clash with Eddie Flynn of Lynn in a six-contest, while George Brooks of Lowell will exchange blows with Willie Green, the South Boston boxer, in a six-round encounter.

Peters Re-elected Exeter Captain

EXETER, N. H., June 8.—Wilton Peters of Providence has been re-elected captain of the Exeter baseball team for next season. Peters this year completes his third year on the nine, he having played one year as outfielder when Martin J. Donovan of Salem was captain and catcher. His work in the Exeter-Andover game was superb, his deadly throwing catching many on the bases. He intends to enter Yale after he graduates. Coach John J. Carney leaves today for his home in Hudson, N. H., but will return in September for Fall practice.

SOFT JOB.

Consider now the motorist—on easy
job is his.
He merely has to drive a car and
whizz and whizz and whizz:
He merely has to shove a car like
blazes round a track,
And sometimes win a purse or two unless he breaks his back.

An auto racer is much like an aviator. He generally is about a length ahead of the hearse.

There appears to be no truth in the report that Bombardier Wells has joined the British army. He still is fighting.

Mike Gibbons says the day of easy money in the fight game is passed. Mike evidently has not heard of Fredde Welsh.

THERE'S A REASON.

A baseball player took a strike and hollered loud and hard,
And consequently he was told to leave the baseball yard.
"Why did you howl?" I asked him,
"That baseball cut the plate."
"Because," the player winked and said, "I had a little date."

One of the redeeming features of a double-header is there is no law which compels a citizen to go to one.

Some persons do not respect the dead. For instance, Jim Coffey went and beat up Jim Flynn.

Ping Bodie has a distinct advantage over the average human being in this rough weather. It is a physical impossibility for him to get a cold in the head.

We are sorry to hear that George McBride was put out of a game for disputing a decision, but if George made a kick we feel safe in saying that it was a bum decision.

The Illinois boxing bill lost because it had too many undesirable friends. It probably would have won if it had used insect powder.

A whole lot of ball players would like to see Walter Johnson kept in left field if he would only pitch from that position.

It is said that Herzog ignores Rigler on the field, showing that Charley is considerable of a strategist.

Even in wartime the English government will have its little joke. It allowed Bombardier Wells to join the army.

Ritchie Refuses to Box Charlie White

CHICAGO, June 8.—Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion, before leaving here for Portland, Ore., declined an offer from Tom Andrews of Milwaukee to fight Charlie White ten rounds there in July. Willie said he is not at his best in hot weather and gave this as his reason for refusing the match.

Bike Fans Out for Lynn Boy in Bike Race

Local bike "fans" have literally gone wild over the great "come back" of Elmer Collins and a record crowd is expected at the first mid-week meet of the season at the Revere cycle track tomorrow night, when the Lynn boy meets Victor Linart, the speedy Belgian, and Clarence Carman, holder of the American middle distance championship, in a thirty-mile motor-paced race.

Collins, who was regarded as a back number, has suddenly burst into the front ranks of the pace followers. He has taken part in three races this season and has beaten both George Wiley and Georges Seres, considered the greatest pace follower in the world.

Linart has yet to lose a race this season. He has beaten Didier and Wiley twice each. Linart's most notable piece of work was a double victory on Memorial Day.

Carman is a speedster from the word "go." Tomorrow night's race interests the champion in more ways than one. His right to the title has been disputed many times. This has peeved him, and he is out to show the skeptic ones that he is worthy of the crown he now wears.

Besides the motor-paced race there will be a special tandem race and the regular list of amateur and professional events.

Harvard Football to Start on Sept. 13

Football practice for the Harvard varsity squad will start on September 13, two weeks before the opening of the college year.

All the punters and dropkickers on the squad who are returning to college next year have been provided with footballs by the athletic association for practice during the summer months.

The principal dropkickers in the Harvard squad next year will include J. A. Doherty '16, G. A. McKinlock '16 and W. F. Robinson '18, of the freshman eleven last Fall. The punting duties will be delegated to Captain Mahan, C. C. Felton '16, W. Whitney '16 and Tom Enwright, captain of the 1918 team.

There is some uncertainty whether Enwright will be able to play on the varsity next year on account of trouble in his side. He had to give up baseball a few weeks ago because of the effects of an appendicitis operation last Winter, and it has been intimated that he will not come out for the team next year.

McCabe New Athletic Director of B. C. H.

Thomas McCabe, star football player of Holy Cross, has decided to accept the position offered him by the Boston College Preparatory School authorities and will become a teacher in languages and mathematics at the school, and also athletic director, next September.

McCabe has played four years at end on the Holy Cross varsity eleven, and previously at English High and at Exeter. He was rated as one of the best ends and punters at any of the colleges.

During several baseball seasons he has operated the electric scoreboards at both Boston ball grounds, and has had unusual opportunities while working his way through college in this manner for the study of professional baseball technique and methods.

He has also had experience in track and in basketball.

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Fenway Park has housed [illegible] near having staged but rain prevailed—two noted boners, and both by smart players. One was by Johnny Evers against the Athletics, the other by Larry Doyle against the Braves. Another classic muff in this park was Snodgrass' muff, and still another, the combined failure of Merkle, Meyers and Matty to catch an easy foul, and none of these players, either, is a slow thinker.

President Tener has written to club owners and managers calling attention to the advisability of keeping games moving briskly. The National League has done well in this respect this season, and the Tener idea is to keep it up.

* * *

George Cockill, the new National League umpire, made a most favorable impression at his debut the other day. Before becoming an umpire Cockill won three pennants as a manager in the Tri-State League, and in the off seasons he is football and baseball coach at Bucknell. Rigler and Quigley are also football sharps. Bob Emslie is a trap shot and Bill Klem is a scream on the links.

Bill Speas, outfielder of the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League, tells what he considers the funniest thing he has ever seen on a ball field, and strange to relate, two major league players have mentioned this game incident as the funniest thing they ever saw. Here's the story:

"You might not believe this," writes Bill, "but I've got several clippings to prove it. It happened in 1906 in the Pennsylvania and Ohio League. I was playing with Mansfield, and Old Doc Emley, the old-time Columbus pitcher, was doing the twirling for us. Our opponents had us beaten about 10 to 3 when one of them caught hold of one and slammed it down the right field foul line. The umpire threw in another ball and he knocked it foul again. Then he slammed one at me in left field, and, after breaking my neck to keep from rolling into the next State, I got it and threw it in to the plate. Only I hit the grandstand instead.

"Well, in the meantime the fielders had recovered the foul balls and the shortstop had one running a man down between second and third and the second baseman had the other trying to catch a runner between first and second. The catcher was chasing the ball I threw in. It looked like a fire in a Chinese laundry the way everybody was running around. I was almost sick from laughing out there in left field.

"The ump eventually ruled the foul balls out of play and held that the ball I threw at the grandstand was the right one. But that didn't change the fact that there were three balls in play at one time."

"Doc" White, old White Sox pitcher, recently appointed head of the Los Angeles club, is now [illegible] who had the [illegible] or [illegible] on Tyrus Cobb. White is believed to be the only human to force Cobb to step aside that a substitute might bat for him. It was early in the Tiger's career.

White fanned him seven consecutive times, feeding him curves for the most part. For a brief time after that Jennings benched Cobb when White was on the firing line. However, in a year or so Cobb got so that he could pelt "Doc's" offerings pretty consistently.

The Spokane club has given the veteran outfielder, Cliff Frisk, his unconditional release, and he will retire to his Green Lake chicken ranch in Seattle and fill in the odd time at his old trade, working as a carpenter. He is one of the most popular ball players that ever wore a uniform in the Northwestern League and in ordinary years would have been sure of a job with the Spokane team, if for nothing else than a pinch hitter.

One big reason for the success of Walter Johnson on the slab is his alacrity in fielding his position. It is a treat to watch the Washington wonder work. He moves about the diamond almost as readily as an infielder, and assists greatly on the defense.

This is one department in which many pitchers do not shine. They are content to pitch and allow their mates to take care of the balls after they are hit. Rain Leever used to argue that it was not a pitcher's place to field his position. But the twirler who wins a really great place in the Diamond Hall of Fame is the one who is in the game at every point and who renders his mates all the assistance possible.

COFFEY NO MATCH FOR CHAMPION

By DAMON RUNYON

We can see but one result in a match between Jess Willard and Jim Coffey on Labor Day, and that is defeat for Coffey. The Irish giant is not yet ready for a battle with the champion, and he will not be ready in September. A year from now it might be a different story, but it is our judgment that rushing him into a tussle with the huge Kansan at this time simply means his elimination from championship consideration.

We have great admiration for Big Jim. We believe that long and careful schooling will eventually develop him to a point where he will have a grand chance to land the title. He is more of a natural fighter than Willard, but he is not now anywhere near as good a fighter as Willard. And he will not be anywhere near as good a fighter as Willard on Labor Day.

Coffey has no idea how to make the other fellow do things. He wants to do it all himself. His only thought is to rush in, [illegible], and trust to luck to put over a knockout punch. Against a fellow like Willard, of all men in the world, these tactics would be useless. If Coffey should shake off punches like a Battling Nelson while he is plunging in his system might be momentarily successful, but Coffey has shown time and again that he is rather easily [illegible] by a wallop to the jaw, and therefore it behooves him to learn some method of avoiding wallops to the jaw.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular at the opening and markets were active. Within a few minutes the tone improved and the trend was upward. There was great uncertainty over reports from Washington as to the administration's attitude on the German trouble, but sentiment was hopeful and had a bullish undercurrent. Before American markets opened a number of our stocks were up in London, including U. S. Steel, Union Pacific, Amalgamated and Southern Pacific. [illegible] were small but sufficient to reflect the prevailing opinion in New York. Copper metal is still advancing and spelter stronger, if anything, than ever. Bids for lead are much higher. Speculation in stocks, however, is still retarded by doubt as to what may develop in this country's foreign relations.

WAR ORDER STOCKS HIGHER.

In initial dealings in New York war order stocks were again most in demand. Rails and some standard industrials were comparatively neglected. Bethlehem Steel touched the new high record of 162, an advance of seven points. Among early gains in that market were Amalgamated [illegible], Chino [illegible], Utah [illegible], Inspiration [illegible], Anaconda [illegible], American Can 1⅛, U. S. Steel [illegible], Crucible Steel [illegible], Baldwin Locomotive [illegible], General Motors 1⅜, Mexican Petroleum 1⅞, U. S. Rubber [illegible], Studebaker [illegible], Westinghouse [illegible], Union Pacific [illegible], Reading [illegible], Canadian Pacific 1⅛ and St. Paul [illegible].

In Boston Zinc issues were again very active as well as strong, Butte & Superior advancing 1⅛ and American Zinc 1. Among other gains were Calumet & Arizona [illegible], Calumet & Hecla 3, North Butte [illegible], New Arcadian [illegible], U. S. Smelting [illegible], Shoe Machinery [illegible] and United Fruit [illegible]. Alaska Gold was off [illegible], Granby [illegible], Greene-Cananea [illegible], Allouez [illegible] and Osceola 1.

COPPER PRICE ASCENDS.

Electrolytic copper has sold at 19¾ cents a pound, an advance of ¼. It is believed in the trade that it will bring 20 cents before the end of the week. It is estimated that inquiries total 100,000,000 pounds. After a lull the demand suddenly assumed record-breaking proportions. Foreign requirements are very large while domestic consumers are now seeking large supplies. In the London metal market today spot and futures were 10s lower and electrolytic was up 10s. Brass spelter has sold in this country for November delivery at 23 cents a pound. Zinc ore are being sold at from $110 to $115 a ton. Sales of [illegible] cents a pound, St. Louis, have been made for lead.

VOTE STANDING IN TOURS RACE

The manager of the AMERICAN'S California Tours Contest has good news today for the fighting candidates.

The vote standing for series "A," "B" and "C" will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN. Series "D" standing will appear one week later.

Twenty-five days more and the race for the twenty-five [illegible] trips to the Pacific Coast and Expositions will have been won.

The time to secure a place among the winners is NOW, during the next twenty-five days.

DOUBLE your efforts [illegible] your friends to increased vote-gathering activity. Take courage and work as you never have before, for if you win the Tour will amply repay you for your efforts.

Ford to Incorporate in Another State

LANSING, Mich., June [illegible].—The Ford Motor Company of Detroit will have to incorporate in some other State when it makes its contemplated increase in capital stock from $2,000,000 to $100,000,000.

According to an announcement of Secretary of State Vaughan today, there is a statutory limitation of $25,000,000 in the amount that any corporation can incorporate for in this State. This will necessitate the Ford company's incorporating in some other State.

Sue Storstadt for Mail on Empress

MONTREAL, June 8.—The postmaster-general of Canada has entered suit in the Admiralty Court for $375,340 damages from the owners of the Scandinavian steamship Storstadt, which rammed and sank the Empress of Ireland in the St. Lawrence River. The suit is based upon the loss of registered mail carried by the Empress.

ISABELLA M. BARCLAY, No. 94 Glen street, Whitman, a candidate in the AMERICAN'S California Tours Contest, who declares she will be among the winners when the final votes are counted.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE;
OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Secret Diplomacy Should Be Abolished

In his remarkable series of articles entitled "Common Sense About the War," G. Bernard Shaw says:

> And of course the Kaiser is a junker, though less true blue than the Crown Prince and much less autocratic than Sir Edward Grey, who, without consulting us, sends us to war by a word to an ambassador and pledges all our wealth to his foreign allies by one stroke of his pen.

Again he says:

> Our autocratic foreign policy, in which the Secretary for Foreign Affairs makes war and concludes war without consulting the nation or confiding in it or even refraining from deceiving it as to his intentions, leads inevitably to a disastrous combination of war and unpreparedness for war.
> Wars are planned which require huge expeditionary armies, trained and equipped for war. But as such preparation could not be concealed from the public it is simply deferred until war is actually declared at the most frightful risk of such an annihilation of our little peace army as we escaped by the skin of our teeth at Mons and Cambrai. One way of getting an army able to fight the German army is to declare war on Germany just as if we had such an army and then trust to the resultant peril and disaster to drive us into wholesale enlistment, voluntary or compulsory. It seems to me that a nation which tolerates such insensate methods and outrageous risks must perish from sheer lunacy.
> I therefore suggest that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs be powerless to fire a shot or sign a treaty without authority of the House of Commons, and THAT ALL DIPLOMATIC BUSINESS BE CONDUCTED IN A BLAZE OF PUBLICITY.

These frank and sensible words of Shaw exactly fit our own American case.

England is at war—a terrible war—because one man made a secret treaty which never would have been made had the people of England known anything about it.

And America may be precipitated into war by one man, by secret diplomatic instructions and notes of which the American people have not an inkling until they have been transmitted and done their deadly work.

One man—Woodrow Wilson—has the power to keep under his hand all the facts, all the documents, all the sworn testimony and to decide whether or not the rest of us hundred million Americans shall enter upon the destructive and desperate war.

It matters not how good a man Woodrow Wilson is, how patriotic he is, how superior in intellect he may be, this is a power too tremendous and too heavily freighted with destiny to be intrusted to his hands or to the hands of any individual on earth.

There is no reason, except ancient custom, why the American people should not be kept informed as to every step in foreign negotiations. There is no reason why all of us should not know what documents have been filed, in any case what facts are in evidence.

There is no reason why the President should not take the whole nation into his confidence.

There is every reason why this course should be pursued.

There is every reason why the American people should decide whether or not they desire to go to war.

It is the people who must pay the bill.

It is the people who must fight, who must make up the ghastly lists of the wounded and maimed, who must fill the vast graves into which the dead of the battlefield are horribly thrust.

If there must be war, the spirit of our people is strong to make and to win war.

But there should never be any possibility of war being made except by the well-considered and deliberate mandate of the people given after full knowledge of the facts.

Secret diplomacy is the guilty cause of all the hideous slaughter and devastation which is now making Europe a hell of human misery.

There is no place for this senseless relic of medieval tyranny in the consultations, the negotiations and the decisions of a free and intelligent people.

There was a time when the people of the land, as well as the land itself, were the personal property of the one man who held the throne. It was in such times that kings sent their diplomats to bargain for the transfer of human beings and the slaughter of human beings in war exactly as cattle dealers bargain for stock today.

These bargains were made in secrecy. And that was diplomacy.

These times are long past. No man believes now in the sacredness of kings or their divine rights. The world has outgrown that folly.

And just as the common sense of free men has abolished kings and their preposterous assertions of powers, so the common sense of free men ought to abolish the secret bargaining and negotiationing which were the appanages of kings and their ministers.

Let us be done with this thing.

Let the American people know what is transpiring in the Department of State.

Let the American people have every fact concerning the Lusitania which the administration has in its possession.

Let the American people know all the documents, all the affidavits, all the statements, all the assertions and counter-assertions.

Let the American people be taken into consultation by their President and let them decide whether or not there is cause to call Germany to sharp account.

If it should by any deplorable chance of fate happen that we are to have war with Germany or with any other power, let that war be the united act of the American people—a war which they themselves have decided to be a just and righteous war.

Then with clean hands and stout hearts they will fight as a people should fight—cheerfully, bravely, to the death.

THE ORANGOUTANGO!

The Way They Did It in the Early Days

Do not fancy, gentle maiden,
While you're lightly prancing thru
Tripping trot or tangled tango,
That you're doing something new.

This was one of the diversions
Of old, prehistoric man,
And they danced it in the jungle,
E'er the human race began.

All the dances we are dancing
Are legitimate successors
Of the old orangoutango
Of our early predecessors.

The Day's Cycle

By Ann Lisle

BEYOND the skies where sunset clouds
Of deepest rose are sailing,
Beyond the place where fading bands
Of golden light are trailing;
Beyond the land of light and glow,
Beyond the glory paling slow,
Into far realms that darkness know
The light creeps—day is failing.

On thru the dark where midnight gloom
In giant clouds comes drifting,
And thru the courts where silence reigns
In shadow never lifting.
Far from the land of light and glow,
Forgetting pageantry and show,
Into the realms that darkness know
My gloomy heart is drifting.

Into the hush of golden dawn
Where sunrise clouds are sailing,
Into the skies where gleaming bands
Of rosy light are trailing;
From out the land of afterglow,
From out the realms that darkness know,
Into the world comes day—and lo!
My heart forgets its wailing.

Tells How a Girl May Succeed as an Author

Compiled by Ethel Lloyd Patterson

Mrs. Atherton is unquestionably one of the foremost women novelists of today. Her latest novel, "Perch of the Devil," has been as widely read as any American fiction of recent years.

No. 1.—THE FIRST DECISION

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON

THE very first thing to be decided by the girl who wishes to earn her own living as a writer is whether she really has any great natural talent for the career she has chosen, or whether her ability to express herself on paper is merely a mild aptitude.

The way of the Genius is not the way of the Drudge. She who must win by plain hard work might as well make up her mind in the beginning there are certain heights she is not destined to attain. To be specific, the novel and the drama are the literary "heights." They are not for the many. Novelists and dramatists, like marriages, are "made in heaven."

But when, after months, or, more probably, years, of work, a girl does come to the realization that these forms of self-expression are not for her, it does not mean she never can earn her living as a writer. Remember that. The Short Story, the Special Article and the Career of a Journalist are still open to her.

Contrary to most people, I believe a girl with common sense can force a talent for short story writing, though she had it not in the first place. I do not mean that the stories of the painstaking worker will echo down the ages as might the brilliant efforts of the naturally endowed. But these efforts can be made salable; they will, after the proper concentration and labor, afford their author a comfortable livelihood.

I feel I scarcely need pause to give advice here and now to the genius, nor even to the girl who hopes to become a novelist. The novel is the last literary development. To reach it successfully, and not before she is ripe for it, the young author must pass through the successive phases of newspaper work, magazine articles and short stories. By the time any girl is "ripe" to start her first novel her own judgment will tell her whether or not she is qualified to undertake the task. A novel requires limitless imagination and limitless endurance. The novel is a form of drudgery which no girl equipped only with a mediocre talent can sustain.

But for the girl who wishes to foster an ability to write short stories I have two words of advice: First—and I should like to underscore this—write only of the things you know. Do not attempt to describe types of people you never have known, and do not write of places you never have seen. The world is full of "stories." They are around you everywhere. The girl who is beginning to write should try to picture the stories of the people about her—the people she knows to the innermost recesses of their hearts.

My second word of advice to the girl who would write is: Use common sense. Do not think of writing as a temperamental, nerve-racking calling. Go at it, instead, in a businesslike, workmanly way. Be sure you have the fundamentals—a knowledge of good English and a sense of literary construction—well in your head; then work, observe, and—use your common sense for all it is worth.

American Womanhood

By Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton

HISTORICALLY, it is not a great distance between the Pilgrim Mothers and the women of today, but from the point of view of a developing civilization, the distance is amazing

If the world at large has progressed in the last fifty years more than in its entire previous history; if knowledge has attained a wider sweep, skill a more marvellous exhibit, and the relationships of humanity are interlocking such as was never dreamed a hundred years ago, it is an interesting and vital question whether the ideals of womanhood, of the Pilgrim Mothers, are too meagre for the present maddening maze of things, and whether their domestic cooking, spiced as it was with the ideals of strength, capability, devotion, love and duty, would attract the modern palate, in what, because of the commingled races upon our shores, has been described as our "ethnic stew."

It is always interesting and self-gratulatory reading to follow the appreciations of American womanhood by writers from over the sea.

The grace and the charm of her personal appearance are to them a source of unfailing delight, while the sparkle of her mind, the freedom, sometimes quite startling, of her carriage, and the venture and dash of her appropriation of life, evoke, at least from some of them, the affirmation that America is the paradise of women.

The colleges provided for her education are always an amazement, while her ability in education and her social equality give her most enviable prestige among the women of the world.

To be sure, some of them notice as an apprehension for the future ugly facts regarding population, as, for example, that in the New England States the birth rate among the natives is exceeded by the death rate, and that the enlarging population is due to the presence of the foreigner, but, as an offset to this, there is the assimilation of the American ideal by the children of the foreigner, which insures its safety in the heart of womanhood.

Meantime, the attention of men is increasingly commanded by the pursuit of wealth and the relaxations which wealth make possible and the leadership of mammon becomes more evidential, even if not, as we trust, more effective. Men are handing over to the women certain most desirable adjuncts of character and of life as they strip themselves for the race.

They are handing over their money, for their home is their pride and the comfort of the family their joy, but they are also handing over the opportunities for culture and for development.

Women are very rapidly becoming better educated than men in America, and thus are cultivating ideal interests which men are too largely permitting to remain uncared for.

American womanhood must choose between aristocracy and democracy as a national ideal, and can have no sympathy with tightly drawn lines, either in society or elsewhere, between those who work and those who do not. The defending of women who work in their essential womanliness is one of the mighty tasks of loyal American womanhood.

But womanhood has influence far beyond the borders of her own sex. She makes the manhood of the nation.

What she is men will inevitably become, and her elevation will be the measure of his aspiration; what she expects from him he will grant, for her wish is eventually his will. What shall be her foil to the present age temptation of the American man? And what her contribution in that partnership, out of which the American which is yet to be shall arrive?

She will do many things; the question is not so much what she will do, but what she will be. To bring to pass her ideals is her true task—the ideals of her foremothers, the "courageous, capable, strong, devoted type, sacrificing self for devotion to love and duty, and rejoicing in her work."

The mission and the opportunity of American womanhood is to inspire American manhood with the expectant and commanding imperative of her ideals, by living them in strength and dignity and by refusing to permit any commercial or social or civic activity to tarnish their lustre or to dethrone their elevation.

From the moment Susan Lenox opened her eyes in a small Indiana town until she achieved fame in New York her life was crowded with unusual events.
